'Utmost Haste' Urged on Congress for Permanent Act.

Coercion Charge Brought by Lewis

Sloan Assails Labor Chief as 40,000 Return to Jobs.

By William V. Nessly.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, thus far blocked in efforts to bring about resumption of peace negotiations in the General Motors automobile strike, yesterday called for a new weapon.

In identical letters to Speaker Bankhead and Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, she asked that Congress enact "with utmost haste" legislation granting her the power of subpena to determine the causes of any strike or lockout and to make recommendations for settlement and future procedures. While the legislation would be intended as a permanent provision, speedy enough enactment, it was clear, would permit its application in the General Motors tie-up.

Other Developments.

Other developments in the motors strike included these:

John L. Lewis, labor chieftain, filed with the Labor Secretary an affidavit from a vice president of the United Automobile Workers intended to bear out charges of "coercion" by General Motors.

General Motors officials posted in all its plants notices to employes denying Miss Perkins' charge the company is shirking its public responsibility and asserting Lewis is demanding that the company turn over its employes "body and soul, for exploitation."

Forty thousand G. M. C. employes returned to work in Chevrolet plants in Michigan and Indiana, plants in which no strikes have been called but which were closed by lack of materials or parts, due to strikes elsewhere.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee heard a U. A. W. A. organizer voice an implied threat to call 16,000 Chrysler Corporation employes from their jobs "unless the use of stool pigeons in the plants is discontinued."

Miss Perkins' letter, pointing out that in serious strikes there always are charges and counter-charges about which it is difficult to determine the truth, said that frequently the causes leading up to strikes or lockouts are "deliberately concealed or overlooked." The public interest, as a result, she said, frequently is lost sight of and adjustment and settlements are made on the basis of expediency.

She held it necessary that some agency have the duty and authority to make formal inquiries, formulate recommendations and make public reports. In order to serve the "true public interest," she said in the letter, the agency would have to have the power of subpenaing books, papers, records and witnesses, and to take testimony under oath.

The letter closed with this paragraph:

"I wish to recommend to you the utmost haste compatible with sound procedure in the passage of this act because of the particular situations growing out of a number of current important and serious strikes."

Miss Perkins said the President had not taken a stand on the proposal. She said the legislation would not force disputants to confer but would bring out all important facts and would permit determination of "the causes of methods used," such as the "sit-down" strike method.

Gets Coercion Affidavit.

Earlier in the day Miss Perkins had conferred with Lewis and a half dozen other officers of the automobile union and Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization. At that meeting it was agreed that the labor heads would prepare data on their charges of coercion by General Motors for her information. Late in the day Lewis complied by sending her the affidavit by Edward Hall, of the automobile workers union, regarding reported events at Anderson, Ind., plants of General Motors.

The affidavit said G. M. C. officials "have followed a policy of attempting to arouse, through false propaganda and coercive measures, antagonisms on the part of local business men and the employes of the corporation against the organizing campaign of the union." It charged the G. M. C. program "was based on a deliberate attempt to incite deeds of violence and malicious destruction

Job to Be Given Juliana's Prince At $109,500 Yearly

The Hague, Jan. 27 (AP).—The Dutch government plans to put Prince Bernhard von Lippe Biesterfeld on the pay roll soon.

The matter was left over during the rush preceding the German-born prince's wedding to Crown Princess Juliana January 7. With the wedding over, officials said a measure will be presented to Parliament in the spring.

It will provide an annual income of 200,000 guilders, a little more than $109,500. Juliana draws a similar sum.

Prince Bernhard will have few duties. The chief one, the Dutch say frankly, will be to be the father of Juliana's children so that the ruling dynasty may be perpetuated.

'Crazy Torpedo,' Invented by Italy, Drops From Plane

Rome, Jan. 27 (AP).—A "crazy torpedo" which falls from the air with a parachute is Italy's latest contribution to weapons of war, aviation circles announced today.

It is carried by certain types of bombing planes. At a given moment it is released from a considerable height.

As it falls a parachute opens and it drifts down to land in, say, an enemy harbor. As it strikes the water the impact starts a mechanism going to turn a small propeller.

The parachute cord, impregnated with a chemical, burns through on touching the water and the parachute detaches from the torpedo.

With the propeller now whirring, the torpedo starts on its journey of death. A small set rudder sends it in a large circle. Traveling in a circle in an enemy harbor it is almost bound to strike a ship or dock.

Glass Injects Supreme Court Issue in Senate

By Robert C. Albright.

Pent-up feelings for and against a more liberal view of the Constitution and modification of Supreme Court powers broke in a tempest of oratory on the Senate floor yesterday, with Senator Carter Glass, Virginia's "unreconstructed rebel," in the thick of the verbal storm.

Undercurrent discussion of suggestions for curbing the court shot to the surface of Senate debate after Glass cited a Grover Cleveland feed and seed loan veto message as "an interesting relic of real Constitutional Government."

The reference brought Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson to his feet with the shouted statement:

"I repudiate the implication that * * * the Constitution of my country and yours renders the national Government powerless to relieve the distress and suffering of the people that constitute its citizenship."

The Virginian lashed back, and the ensuing heated debate found Mr. Glass holding the floor against half a dozen Senators placing various constructions on the general welfare clause of the Constitution and the power of Congress to legislate for national or local relief.

"I am in favor of the 'horse and buggy' age, if that means respect for the Constitution of the United States and of the Supreme Court acting under the Constitution of the United States," Glass told the Senate. "I am not willing to tear that court down because I may disagree with some of its decisions."

Loan Bill Passed.

In the end, the $50,000,000 feed and seed loan bill, which had precipitated the discussion, was passed without a record vote and sent to the White House. President Roosevelt last year had vetoed a similar measure, explaining there was sufficient relief money available for the purpose.

The Cleveland veto message, read by the clerk at the request of Glass, was dated February 16, 1887, and turned thumbs down on a $10,000 appropriation to provide seeds for drought-stricken Texas farmers.

Cleveland, in his message, said he found "no warrant for such an appropriation in the Constitution, and I do not believe that the power and duty of the general Government ought to be extended to the relief of individual suffering which is in no manner properly related to the public service or benefit." He added that "the lesson should be constantly enforced that though the people support the Government the Government should not support the people."

Flood Relief Cited.

Reading of the item brought Senator Robinson to the floor with the comment that "there is not the slightest liklihood that the Government ever will go back to the doctrin that the Constitution renders the United States powerless in a time of great peril to its citizens."

"Instead of indulging the hope that the United States will go back, as some may have suggested, to theory and a practice that disarms the greatest power we possess in the face of peril, I express the hope that it will go forward."

Robinson said the Cleveland doctrin quoted by Glass would leave the Government powerless to aid the 500,000 persons made homeless by the present flood, and said there is "practically no limitation" on the appropriating power of Congress except that imposed by conscience.

"I would hide my face in shame if I held there is no power, save that possessed by those who are helpless,

District Man Shot to Death By Police Officer He Knifed

Clarence Boyd Phillips, 41, of 3711 Macomb street northwest, was shot to death last night by Policeman Augustus J odwell, of the Eighth Precinct. Bodwell drew his gun and fired three shots into Phillips' side after the man attacked him with a razor, wounding him seriously in the face and neck.

Policemen Bodwell and Roland F. Kirby were sent to Phillips' home on complaint of the man's brother, Gorman A. Phillips, who operates a dry cleaning establishment on the lower floor. Gorman Phillips told police his brother was drunk and violent.

When the two officers arrived they had difficulty in subduing the intoxicated man. He broke away from them, ran to his room and returned brandishing a razor. Bodwell grappled with him. Phillips sunk the razor into the cheek of the policeman, who fell, drawing his pistol as he went down and shooting Phillips fatally.

Phillips was removed to Georgetown Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. The policeman also was carried to the hospital, where physicians said that he was seriously wounded, having lost much blood.

The dead man's brother said that Phillips had not been employed in recent months, being unable to hold a job because of his drinking. He said that he called police when his brother became very disorderly and he feared for their mother, Mrs. Clara S. Phillips, who lives with them.

Reich-Japan Plot on Soviet Charged by 2

Accused Conspirators Tell of War Plans for 1937.

Trotzky's Son Reported Held; Wrecking of Trains Admitted.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Jan. 27.—A German-Japanese war against the Soviet Union was planned for 1937, 2 of 17 confessed conspirators to overthrow the government testified today.

The witnesses were the writer, Karl Radek, and a former railway chief, Ivan Alexandrovich Kniazeff.

Leon Trotzky, who was alleged to have arranged a deal with Germany and Japan by which the two nations would receive territorial concessions in return for aid to the plotters, sent word to Moscow that war would come in 1937, Radek asserted.

He said another of the defendants Gregory Piatikoff, brought the asserted message from Trotzky, whose second son was reported arrested today. (Trotzky has denied vigorously any connection with the plot.)

"Piatikoff told me Trotzky felt Germany needed a year for diplomatic preparation," Radek told the night session of the trial.

"His military preparation was finished.

"He said Germany wanted England's neutrality and some arrangement with France. Germany demanded a complete free hand in the Balkans and the Danube."

Kniazeff, who said he had been a Japanese agent, said other agents of the Nipponese nation, with whom he admitted conspiring to spread disease germs among Russian troops, had held the same views.

Previously Kniazeff, former Soviet Southern Urals Railway executive, told of causing the deaths of 63 persons in a widespread train wrecking program.

Three experts testified all the 3,500 train wrecks which Kniazeff said he caused during 1935 and 1936 could have been prevented.

Nearing the end of the trial, the court announced a closed session tomorrow to hear evidence banned in open court. It was expected the case would go to the judges Friday night.

Unofficial reports that Trotzky's second son, Sergei Sedoff, only member of the family remaining in Russia, had been arrested at Krasnoyarsk gained general acceptance in Moscow, especially among foreign diplomats.

Believed in Prison.

The official Communist newspaper Pravada published demands of workers that the secret police arrest him. This was considered strong evidence he was in prison.

The report, which Moscow officials refused to confirm or deny, said he had been taken into custody after an alleged attempt to poison factory workers with generator gas.

Leon Trotzky said in Mexico City his son was arrested in 1934 and "we are in total ignorance of his fate."

Supervisor Lebedeff and a worker at the Karasnoyarsk machine factory, it was said, denounced Sergei as a "worthy offspring of the vile Trotzky" and declared a gas poisoning attempt was "inspired by the leadership of the father." (Leon Trotzky has said his son never was engaged in politics.)

Officials said Sergei's real name is Sergei Bronstein, after his father's family name before he assumed the name Trotzky. So far as is known, they said, Sergei is the only direct relative who did not flee the Soviet Union with others of the family when Trotzky was forced into exile.

Another defendant testifying at today's trial was Ivan Josef Grashe, 57-year-old Austro-Hungarian, who said he was a spy "by profession."

Tells of Espionage.

"After becoming a Soviet citizen in 1924 I became an agent in the German intelligence service in 1932. Prior to that I was with the Czechoslovakian intelligence," he said.

"I worked in the Komintern, later in the chemical industry."

Grashe said he placed a German named Lenz, who was a German agent, in a Soviet industrial plant to obtain secret information. This information was passed to him, Grashe said, and he in turn delivered it to another German agent, Meyerovitz.

Previous witnesses have said the conspirators sought to trade Russian territory for German and Japanese aid in overthrowing the Soviet regime and restoring a modified capitalist system of government.

Stanislav Antonovich Rataichak, 42, told the court he had furnished data to the German intelligence service regularly on the condition of Soviet chemical plants. Rataichak was in a position to do this as head of all chemical industries under the Soviet administration.

Roosevelt to Visit Georgia in March

By the Associated Press.

Thomas J. Hamilton, editor of the Augusta, Ga., Chronicle, said yesterday President Roosevelt planned a visit to Georgia March 8.

Hamilton said the President told him he would leave Washington March 7 by train, motor from Columbia, S. C., to Macon by way of Augusta, then take a special train to his Warm Springs home. Mrs. Hamilton and L. S. Moody, of Augusta, accompanied Hamilton to the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt planned, Hamilton said, to stop at Columbia for breakfast with Governor Johnston on March 8, and have luncheon early in the afternoon at Augusta.

Hamilton said the President told him he wanted to make brief stops during the March trip at Louisville and Milledgeville, former capitals of Georgia.

Hundreds Perish, Million Homeless As Army Prepares to Move 500,000; Louisville Buries Dead in Trenches

Cincinnati Tide Recedes; Inhabitants Facing Water Shortage.

Paducah Suffering Influenza Epidemic

Property Damage Mounts to $400,000,000 in Eleven States.

By the Associated Press.

Citizens on the 1,500-mile flood front awoke today to a realization that the number of dead is running into the hundreds as the Ohio swept on toward the Mississippi and the United States Army made ready to evacuate any danger point from Cairo, Ill., to New Orleans.

Louisville, Ky., struggling under the Ohio's record inundation, had a tragically mounting list of fatalities.

Elsewhere, the Ohio was receding or stationary at most points, leaving Cincinnati, Portsmouth, Ohio, and many lesser cities hopeful.

They faced, nevertheless, disease, water shortage and cold. Coast Guard officials reported influenza of epidemic proportions at one point—Paducah, Ky.

The homeless in 11 States were nearly 1,000,000, property damage, at a conservative guess, was more than $400,000,000.

120 Bodies Found.

At Louisville, Health Commissioner Hugh Rodman Leavell said bodies had been taken from the city's submerged West End; he maintained none had drowned, but all died of exposure, pneumonia and heart ailments.

In addition, there were reliable estimates of 300 deaths in hospitals there from flood effects.

Frantic workers sought to build higher the 60-foot seawall at Cairo, Ill., at the confluence of the Ohio and the Mississippi, where a crest of 61 feet was predicted Thursday or later when the vast Bird's Point spillway in Missouri, purposely blasted for protective inundation, is filled. The Ohio stood at 58.1 feet at Cairo Wednesday.

Crucial Test to Come.

The crucial test of the massive Mississippi protection system—built after the devastating overflows in 1927—was yet to come. For hundreds of miles up and down this channel thousands of men—working in relays—fought the great battle of the levee line. In the New Orleans-Vicksburg, Miss., area officials said they expected no "super" flood and that existing facilities would handle the water.

In a particularly menaced section below Cairo residents of at least two towns—Tiptonville, Tenn., and New Madrid, Mo.—were begged to get out before it was too late.

"Those people will drown like rats in a trap unless they get out now—while there is still time," said George Myer, a Red Cross national director. "The levees are sure to break."

Concentrate on Main Dikes.

From United States Engineers a call went out to all men to leave their fights upon the tributary streams and to concentrate every effort to save the main dikes in the long stretch from Illinois to the Gulf.

Rain or snow was predicted in the next 36 hours over parts of the flooded Ohio and Mississippi Valleys, but there was not expected a "flood-producing precipitation."

United States Army Engineers predicted the Ohio River would crest at a 62-foot stage at Cairo, Ill., six days hence. Thereafter, flowing down the Mississippi, the climactic "zenith," they said, would reach 55 feet at Memphis, Tenn., four days later, and touch 66 feet at Helena, Ark., two days after the Memphis crest.

Disaster Diseases Are Fatal to 300

By Edward J. Neil,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Louisville, Ky., Jan. 27.—Sudden realization that flood victims in Louisville alone may total hundreds broke upon this harassed city today as police brought 130 bodies out of the completely submerged West End.

Health Commissioner Dr. Hugh Leavell admitted tonight that 130 bodies of persons who died of disease before relief could reach them had been taken from the outer fringe of houses during the day. He said he believed the total of dead there would not exceed 200.

While sun beat down, and the rampaging Ohio after chewing a third of the city away in four days, began receding. Police in boats invaded the totally submerged area along the water front, poorest residential section and hardest hit by the record-shattering rise.

J. Ray Barrett, deputy coroner, said that more than 100 bodies have been taken out of the West End, but as all city officials joined them in reluctance to discuss the situation, he maintained that the victims had died of heart disease, exposure and pneumonia. Barrett insisted that none of these had drowned.

Nine Deputy Coroners.

Police, in boats, brought the dead back to half a dozen depots where nine undertakers of the city had been sworn in as deputy coroners by Coroner John M. Keaney. There were conflicting stories of methods of disposal of the dead. The city is fighting groggily against steadily increasing illness and the threat of epidemics, despite the arrival of fresh loads of doctors, nurses, medical supplies, 600 Federal soldiers and hundreds of police flown here today in response to Mayor Neville Miller's radio plea for help.

Dr. Leavell, city health officer, said that badly decomposed bodies had been taken to trenches in Highland cemeteries for buriol. No identification was attempted because of the urgent sanitary problem, he said. He maintained he did not know the sex or the age of any of these victims; that he did not know whether they were colored or white.

From other sources came reports, officially denied, that the city incinerator plant was being used as a crematory.

Number of Dead Unknown.

"We have no way of knowing how many dead we will find when the waters go down," Dr. Leavell said, as he went about the work of relief, exhausted by a four-day vigil. "They just told me they found three more bodies in a house in the northeastern section of the city. The death total should not run into hundreds, certainly it will not go to thousands.

"We already have inoculated between 75,000 and 100,000 people against typhoid. We have all the doctors, nurses and medical supplies we need now, counting what is already on the way, with the exception of chloride of lime. We need all we can get of that for disinfecting purposes."

Just as Louisville couldn't seem to realize the magnitude of the surging waters that have reached 11 feet above the previous record level of 1884, neither could the city seem to grasp the possibilities of a death toll of great proportions.

The Ohio never before has done this, they seemed to believe. It just couldn't be real, it couldn't happen.

More Than 300 Dead.

But with deaths in hospitals, from illnesses attributed to flood conditions, already estimated in excess of 300, and more hundreds of bodies coming out of the West End, the horror of the possibilities ahead broke on the city. Approximately 230,000 of the population are homeless, living with friends on higher ground or in refugee camps that dot the highlands, eating rationed food and drinking rationed water.

Homes penetrated today by po-

Talmadge Regime Inquiry Demanded

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 26 (AP).—Gov. E. D. Rivers called on the General Assembly today to make a "thorough" investigation of what he termed the "twentieth century military and carpetbag regime" of his predecessor, former Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

Rivers, appearing before a joint session of the Assembly, said he interpreted his election as a mandate of the people to give a "complete accounting" of the Talmadge administration. He added:

"I urge that the mandate of the people be not forgotten."

Roosevelt Orders Troops in 3 Corps Areas to Plan for Crisis.

Experts Hope Dikes Will Control Flood

The United States Army last night was rushing to completion plans for the greatest peace-time evacuation of a populace in history, should the mighty battle under way to keep the raging Mississippi River within its levees fail.

Under orders of President Roosevelt, through the Secretary of War and the Army Chief of Staff, commanders of the Fourth, Seventh and Eighth Army Corps areas were to be prepared by 6 p. m. tomorrow to remove, if necessary, all dwellers within the Mississippi Valley for a distance of some 50 miles on the west and approximately 30 miles on the east, from Cairo, Ill., southward.

Officials were hopeful the removal would not be necessary, that the levees would hold, or that at the worst evacuation would be necessary in only some comparatively small areas. The Chief of Staff last night issued a statement predicting the flood waters would pass down the valley without causing wide inundation and saying "people must not become panic stricken."

Levee System Menaced.

But at the same time there was pouring down from the Ohio River a great flood, which menaced seriously the man-made instruments to keep the Mississippi in check. The levee system, reaching down to New Orleans, was designed to care for a maximum flow of 2,400,000 cubic feet per second. In some places along the Ohio the tremendous flow was placed at 3,000,000 cubic feet a second, and all this was moving rapidly upon the levee system.

Gen. Malin Craig, Army Chief of Staff, called the evacuation plans precautionary, declaring preparations are under way to meet every possible contingency, just as the Army prepares in detail for wars which never eventuate and are never expected to. The Army does not intend to be caught "napping," he declared, and will be prepared to remove every resident in the vast territory should the occasion arise.

The number of persons in the area is estimated at a minimum of 500,000. Orders to the corps area commanders call for detailed plans to remove to high ground and care for them all.

Four Danger Points.

Four main danger points are being watched closely, and frantic efforts are under way to strengthen levees in the menaced sections.

(1) In the New Madrid area, near Cairo, Ill., where a "fuse-plug" levee was blown out to relieve the strain around Cairo, hope was maintained the crest will pass safely. Col. Francis Harrington, of the Army engineers, reported at the White House late yesterday the flood stage at Cairo at noon was 58.1 feet and falling, while the opened floodway was running to half of its capacity.

(2) The mouth of the Arkansas River is the second main danger point.

(3) The mouth of the Red River, farther south, is another cause of worry.

Rescue Work Speeded.

Meanwhile, rescue and relief efforts of the Red Cross, WPA, Army, Navy, Coast Guard, Public Health Service, CCC and other agencies continued unabated all along the Ohio River. And plans were formulated also to undertake the tremendous task of "cleaning up" with the muddy, debris-strewn waters recede.

Cairo was expected to get its crest in the coming week-end. A stage of 62 feet was expected. Four days later the Mississippi's all-time record peak, it was forecast, will be established at 55 feet. Then will come the climax in the grim battle to keep the swirling devastation off of the lowlands.

Gen. Craig's instructions to the corps area commanders said at one point:

"From information now available to the War Department it appears that a very difficult fight must be made to hold the main line levees along the Mississippi River below

Norris Attacks Writ Blocking TVA Pool Plan

McKellar Introduces Bill to Limit Power of Lower Courts.

Termination by President Roosevelt of power pooling negotiations between the Government and private utilities was followed in the Senate yesterday by two attacks on power company litigation designed to stop the spread of TVA.

Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, veteran "father" of the TVA act, accused the power interests of "traveling around" from one court to another, until they found one favorable to their views.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), Tennessee, introduced a bill to deprive lower courts of the power to issue an injunction restraining enforcement of a Federal law until the law had been held "finally invalid by the Supreme Court."

Directed by Injunction.

Both moves apparently were directed at the preliminary injunction against TVA obtained from Federal Judge Gore by 19 power companies.

Norris said the power companies, failing to get an injunction in a Georgia Federal Court, made a similar effort in Alabama, and the day before the case was to come up, withdrew and carried the case to Tennessee.

Denies Selecting Gore.

"Judge Gore was selected by neither party to try the case," Willkie said. "He was appointed especially for the case by the Circuit Court of Appeals at Cincinnati upon the application of TVA and plaintiff."

Norris quoted in the Senate from the Georgia Federal court decision, which later enjoined the Georgia Power Company from proceeding to comply with the Tennessee Federal Court injunction.

Norris lunched yesterday with the President at the White House, where he said they discussed power in a "casual, friendly way."

"We Are Going to be Fair."

The Nebraskan said on leaving the White House that termination of power pooling negotiations "means we are going to be fair but are not going to have our hands tied behind our back."

He told the Senate he was "not criticizing any court" but was "only calling attention to the action taken by the power companies to nullify decisions of the court."

Later, Secretary of Interior Ickes, serving as chairman of a special committee named by the President to frame a National power policy, said the group within the week will complete a draft of legislation covering sale of power from the new Bonneville Dam, on the Columbia River, in Oregon.

Will Study Policy.

He said the committee afterward would study the President's recommendations for drafting a National power policy, with especial regard to uniform rates. The Ickes committee also called at the White House yesterday.

In one quarter it was said last night that Congress later may be asked to extend to other Federal projects, policies laid down in the TVA act, and to give first rights to Federal power to States, counties and municipalities desiring to establish their own electric distribution systems. Protection in some degree of private power investments also is being considered.

The Federal Power Commission announced last night it will hold a joint session with the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission on March 3 "to ascertain and determine all facts, conditions, practices and matters regarding the ownership, operation, management and control" of the servicing companies in the Associated Gas & Electric system.

House Group Approves FHA Debenture Bill

By the Associated Press.

The House Banking Committee approved yesterday a measure to extend for two years governmental authority to guarantee debentures issued by the Federal Housing Administration. Under present provisions the guarantee expires July 1.

The committee reported the FHA had accepted, for insurance, mortgages totaling $625,000,000 since it started operating early in 1935.

"In view of the enormous amount of new homes which must be built in the country within the next few years, in order to relieve an acute shortage which now exists," the committee said, "the operations of the administration should not be hampered by the loss of this guarantee."

Devaluation Denied.

Paris, Jan. 27 (AP).—Reports that France planned further devaluation of its currency were denied today by Vincent Auriol, minister of finance, who said the government would fight any such move with every means at its disposal.

'Era of Good Feeling' Being Kicked Out of Window; Normalcy Is Returning.

BACK to normalcy!

So it seemed to those who attended President Roosevelt's press conference on Tuesday, and sat in the Senate yesterday listening to a sharp debate over constitutional issues which flamed unexpectedly between Democratic Leader Joe Robinson and the irrepressible Senator Carter Glass.

WALTMAN.

It was not the normalcy which Warren G. Harding fought for and won. Nor was it the normalcy which some Republicans spoke of during the last Presidential campaign. Nevertheless, it was normalcy—normalcy of the New Deal before illusions of golden ages and an "era of good feeling" appeared on the horizon some months ago.

Things have been unnatural around here ever since this talk of an "era of good feeling" started. It has been a strange atmosphere—with the White House holding out an olive branch to the public utilities; with Mr. Roosevelt issuing statements interpreted as a rebuke to labor's major domo, John L. Lewis; with Carter Glass and Federal Reserve Chairman Marriner S. Eccles cooing at each other and without a word of public criticism directed toward the New Deal from the Virginian.

But alas and alack! All that now seems over—or at least on the way out—and we are beginning to understand where we stand or sit. With a smile on his face which reached literally almost from ear to ear, President Roosevelt started this business of kicking the "era of good feeling" out of the window.

Without mincing words, the President gave Alfred P. Sloan, jr., General Motors tycoon, a sharp dressing down because he declined to come running to Washington because Miss Frances Perkins, of the Labor Department, said he should. Not only did the Sloan declination display lack of gallantry on the motor magnate's part toward a lady, but it was not a very bright idea.

John Lewis apparently need not worry very much about his own mistakes when people with such little understanding of public psychology as Mr. Sloan are his opponents. At all events, Mr. Lewis is happy again and the President has demonstrated his impartiality by cracking fingers on both sides of this labor dispute. Mr. Roosevelt loves to do that sort of thing. It is his old quarterback role—run a while with the hares and then hunt for a time with the hounds.

Then the President proceeded to shove a little more of the "era of good feeling" out of the window. He announced he had terminated all further negotiations between the TVA and the private electrical utility interests over an arrangement for a pooling of power transmission in the Tennessee Valley area.

The President contended he was forced to take this action because the sweeping nature of the preliminary injunction granted in December against TVA, on petition of 19 utilities, precluded further negotiations. The utility spokesmen thought that a pretty weak reason, since they had asked for an even more sweeping injunction in August—a month before the President made his power pooling proposal.

Of course, the utility men never believed the President was sincere when he proposed that they get together and discuss a pooling plan. The proposal came just as Mr. Roosevelt was warming up in his re-election campaign and the utility men believed it was a gesture to pacify the large number of voters who have some money invested in the electrical utility industry. They went into the conference called by the President—but with their fingers crossed.

The Norris-Rankin public ownership advocates on Capitol Hill several weeks ago gave evidence of great annoyance over the proposed pooling plan. A terrific fight within the TVA organization, smoldering for months, flamed up and it looked like the President would have to give some sign he had not deserted his old public ownership pals. So he seized on the issuance of the injunction as an excuse and made short shrift of his own pooling idea.

* * *

Not all the tramping on the "era of good feeling," however, was done by the President. Senator Glass, whom Mr. Roosevelt once termed "an unreconstructed rebel," apparently has become bored with the dreary Senate proceedings. Just to stir things up a bit, he recalled Grover Cleveland had once vetoed a seed loan bill as unconstitutional.

This infuriated Joe Robinson, who nurses still an ambition to reach the Supreme Court bench, and the fight was on, with Senator Glass proudly proclaiming that "I am in favor of the horse and buggy age if that means respect for the Constitution of the United States and the Supreme Court acting under that Constitution."

Anyway, things are getting normal and colorful again.

to face the storm and peril," Robinson said.

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, interposed that "a sufficient" answer to the Cleveland veto message was the fact that he was President "in the horse-and-buggy days."

Although there may not have been constitutional authority for spending public money for personal or public aid when Cleveland was President, Bailey argued there is ample constitutional authority today. He said the Supreme Court in its AAA decision and in the case of Massachusetts against Mellon, had held Congress had the necessary power if it did not impinge upon the rights of the States.

Glass bided his time to reply to Robinson and Bailey. He said he had not "purposed to raise a riot of oratory here" when he quoted the Cleveland message, but that "simply as a matter of amusement to myself and I trust of interest to the Senate I wanted to indicate how far we had gotten away from some constitutional bases as contrasted with what we think about the Constitution and the courts now."

"Perhaps I am a relic of constitutional government; I am rather inclined to think that I am," said Glass.

"I am under the misguided notion that the Constitution of the United States as it existed in the time of Grover Cleveland is the same Constitution that exists today, and that if Mr. Cleveland, with his clear conception and his courage, could find nothing in the Constitution then which authorized appropriations for special purposes and not for the general welfare, I cannot find anything in the Constitution that warrants such action today.

"Incidentally, I may express the greatest astonishment that any member of the Senate should appeal to decisions of the Supreme Court, whether actually involved or incidental, at the very time when arrangements are going forward to tear down the Supreme Court, and so many persons have no conceptions of its establishment, or its uses in constitutional government."

The Virginian replied sharply to Robinson's contention that his view would leave Congress impotent to meet the flood catastrophe. He said "everybody knows" Congress has power to deal with the present national flood catastrophe—"everyone knows that when we deal liberally and generously with a situation of this sort we are dealing with the general welfare of the country."

"Of course, we should appropriate funds to correct the afflictions, to abate the distresses of a great national disaster which does not merely affect the unfortunate people immediately involved, but affects the entire Nation, and I have no patience with that sort of oratorical condemnation. I have no respect for it, either, and I am not hiding my face in shame either at the suggestion of the Senator from North Carolina (Bailey), or of the Senator from Arkansas (Robinson)."

Glass said there was no excuse for attacking the court because he disagreed with some of its decisions. "I wish some of them never had been rendered, such as that, which has destroyed intrastate commerce, and that which said we might swindle our own people but not foreigners in the matter of our contractual relations. But because I, a layman, disagree with those decisions of the court I am not under my oath as a United States Senator willing to contribute in any degree or at any moment to the effort to tear the court down and make it useless."

He said the Congressional interpretation of the general welfare clause differs widely from the view of the man who wrote it, James Madison.

This brought Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, to his feet with a statement that Madison vetoed a rivers and harbors bill, and if his view had been followed beneficial navigation and reclamation projects would have been stopped.

Glass remarked crisply that "Madison will survive even the condemnation and praise that has been heard here today."

Uncle Sam Slashes Debts of 'Pilgrims' In Alaska Colony

Palmer, Alaska, Jan. 27 (AP).—Uncle Sam substantially reduced the debts of pilgrims in Matanuska Valley today while the colony's "most expensive colonist" demanded a showdown on an order he must pay cash for livestock feed.

Manager Ross L. Sheely of the Alaska Rural Rehabilitation Corporation, the colony's central authority, said the reductions will "approximate the amount it would have cost to maintain these families on relief in the United States for the past 20 months."

Sheely said Charles Ruddell, colonist who has seven children, was "the most expensive colonist and owes more than $14,000."

With the new reductions which have been authorized by the corporation's directors, this will be reduced to about $12,000.

The showdown arose from what Ruddell said was a refusal to sell him more livestock feed on credit.

When they arrived two years ago each family was given a 40-acre tract, loaned $3,000 for 20 years and given credit at the corporation's store.

He said he considered it an "order to leave the colony. Unless the order is rescinded I will go to Washington, to obtain justice."

Busman Freed in Death Of 'Dizzy' Dean Relative

Gulfport, Miss., Jan. 27 (AP).—A circuit court jury today acquitted Robert B. Tinsley, discharged bus driver, of a charge of killing Floyd R. Devine, his former employer, who was a relative by marriage to Jerome "Dizzy" Dean. Devine's widow is a sister of the noted pitcher's wife.

The verdict was greeted with applause from more than 200 spectators in the courtroom. Tinsley admitted he fired the shot that killed Devine at the bus barn last January 8, but maintained he acted in self-defense. Devine had discharged Tinsley the day before.

Guild Contract Signed.

Lynn, Mass., Jan. 27 (AP).—Humphrey Owen, president of the Lynn Chapter, American Newspare Guild, stated today that Frederick W. Enright, publisher of the Lynn Telegram-News, had signed a guild contract, effective March 1, providing salary increases of from 10 to 45 per cent for his entire news staff.

Court Upholds Pension Clause In Security Act

Judge Sweeney Rebuffs Bay State Litigant Second Time.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 27 (AP).—For the second time in the last few months Federal Judge George Sweeney today upheld a section of the social security act and in so doing rebuffed again the stockholder who sought to overcome the law.

Today Judge Sweeney declared the old-age assistance provision of the act constitutional. A short time ago he ruled valid its unemployment insurance tax.

The case on which today's decision hinged reached the court on Davis' attempt, as a stockholder, to prevent the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston from paying the tax for assistance of the aged. His previous failure to have the act outlawed was undertaken in his capacity as a stockholder of the Boston & Maine Railroad.

Legal observers here were quick to note, however, that in upholding the taxing provisions of the act—title eight—Judge Sweeney, himself, raised the question whether section two, which concerns the use of the collected money. Might later be challenged.

The old age assistance portion of the social security law contains two plans, which are complementary. One provides for immediate contributions to States to assist them in caring for their aged; the other sets up an annuity benefit in which all qualified individuals will participate as a matter of right. In both cases the minimum ages of beneficiaries will be 65 years.

Davis' counsel announced he would appeal Judge Sweeney's decision.

Spanish Rebels Shell French Cargo Vessel

Brest, France, Jan. 27 (AP).—The captain of the French cargo boat Beau Manoir said today Spanish Fascist ships shelled his boat while in the Straits of Gibraltar, 22 miles from land.

One shell passed between the mast and smokestack and fell into the sea 15 yards away, he said. The vessel was en route here from Sfax, Tunisia, when the incident occurred. The Beau Manoir was allowed to proceed after establishing her identity by signals.

U. S. Jury Indicts Trio In Gable Extortion Plot

Los Angeles, Jan. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Violet Wells Norton, 47-year-old Englishwoman who declares Clark Gable is the father of her daughter, was indicted today by a Federal grand jury on charges of conspiracy and using the mails to defraud.

Mrs. Norton is charged with having tried to extort money from Gable to support her 13-year-old daughter. The jury also indicted Jack L. Smith, private investigator, and Frank Kienen, of Winnipeg, on similar charges, alleging they conspired with Mrs. Norton.

Larger Revamping Committee Urged

The Senate Rules Committee yesterday approved a special rule for a nine-man committee to study the President's reorganization recommendations, working jointly with a similar committee of the House.

The plan is understood to contemplate enlargement of the present five-man Senate Reorganization Committee, headed by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, depriving him of control by addition of four Senators sympathetic with the Administration's plan.

The Rules committee proposal, which may come up in the Senate today, provides also for enlargement of the present seven-man House Reorganization committee, by addition of two more members. Funds for the reorganization study may be provided in the deficiency relief bill, now awaiting action of the Senate.

Cummings Attacks Levitt Testimony

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday he was "disgusted" with testimony of Albert C. Levitt, a Justice Department assistant, for saying Gov. Lawrence W. Cramer, of the Virgin Islands, was "incompetent."

Levitt, a former Federal judge in the islands, asked the Senate Territories Committee Tuesday to investigate Cramer's administration. Levitt appeared in opposition to Cramer's confirmation for a full term as governor.

"I can sum up my attitude in three words," he added.

"I am disgusted."

N. C. House Committee Votes Child Labor Act

Raleigh, N. C., Jan. 27 (AP).—The child labor amendment, advocated by President Roosevelt, won an initial victory in the North Carolina Legislature today when a House committee reported it favorably, 10 to 6.

Two years ago, a ratification movement was defeated.

December Wages Near 1925 Peak

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday its gages of economic activity climbed higher in December. Employment and pay rolls approached 1923-25 levels.

In a business summary, the board noted a "sharp advance" in December industrial production and added:

"At automobile factories there was a marked increase in output. In the first three weeks of January, activity at steel mills increased somewhat, but there was a decline in assemblies of automobiles as a result of shutdowns occasioned by strikes."

Coal production rose seasonally in December, the board said, and crude petroleum output avoided seasonal tendencies, to register a gain.

The board's index of factory employment stood at 98.2 per cent of the 1923-25 average last month and pay rolls at 94.6 per cent.

Women Fleeing As Cairo Waits Peak of Flood

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 27.—Entrenched behind strengthened levees, Cairo settled down tonight to await the flooding Ohio River's crisis—a predicted 62-feet crest by Sunday—while the river dumped its turgid load into the brimming Mississippi.

This was practically a city of men.

Women and children left by the hundreds, transported by boat, truck and train away from the flood danger. Tonight officials said all but 5,000 of the normal 15,000 residents were gone. Five hundred women remained to aid the flood fighters.

Smashes Set-back Levee.

Above Cairo the Ohio smashed through a set-back levee at Mound City and covered the town of 2,500 under 5 feet of water in half an hour. Rescue boats were sent for 125 CCC workers marooned in the courthouse there. Authorities said 10 feet of water would cover the community by daybreak.

Backwwater flowed into Harrisburg, 22 miles from the river's natural course, and polluted the water supply. Health officers ordered all water boiled and everyone in the town—including scores of flood refugees — inoculated against typhoid fever.

Coast Guard Arrives.

Fifteen Coast Guard boats from Boston came here today to make a fleet of 22 craft plying the flooded Ohio. The cutters carried radio equipment up the river to establish a system of communications for rescue and relief work.

Twenty thousand refugees found shelter in 11 southeastern Missouri concentration camps. Rescue boats cruised the $21,000,000 Birds Point flood basin seeking 125 persons marooned in the vast expanse.

Wheeling Attacks Debris.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 27 (AP).—City and WPA officials mobilized tonight a cleanup attack on the flood debris deposited by the muddy Ohio River over five northern West Virginia "Panhandle" counties. The waters had fallen more than 4 feet lower tonight, and continued to drop.

Sun Is Shining in Louisville, City Is Tense, Aviator Says

Pilot Back From Flood Zone Tells of Army's Work There; Brings Note of Cheer in Emergency 6-Sheet Paper.

Dropping out of western skies at Bolling Field yesterday after a mission of mercy to flood-ravaged Louisville, Lieut. George H. Bowerman, of the Coast Guard, yawned in anticipation of a night's rest before taking off for Memphis and points South.

"Louisville is a beehive of Army activity," he said, "and passenger airlines are rushing policemen there from Columbus by the score. I did not get to the city because Bowman Field is at least 8 miles away. You get the tenseness of the situation though from the scurrying relief workers and the roaring Army trucks."

The tall, weather-beaten pilot took off from Newark, N. J., late Monday with 700 pounds of vaccine cargo. He grounded at Columbus for the night and completed the journey yesterday morning.

"I had no report on the condition of Louisville's Bowman Field, so I felt it unwise to make a night landing," he explained. "However, I was agreeably surprised to find the field in good shape. The sun shone and there was no threat of rain."

Lieut. Bowerman said that airlines were rushing bread to the beleaguered city and that he had talked to a detachment of police at the Columbus airport, who were under emergency orders to proceed to Louisville. One of them had just finished his day's quota of sidewalk pounding, he said.

The Coast Guard pilot brought one copy of printed cheer from the Derby town—"Flood Edition No. 3" of the Courier-Journal and The Louisville Times combined. Published in the office of the Lexington Leader, at Lexington, Ky., the six-sheet edition headlines the declaration of officials that the food supply for Louisville is "held adequate." Three pages are devoted to comics.

Cincinnati Sets Disease Guard As River Ebbs

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Jan. 27.—This weary city turned eagerly to the tasks of rehabilitation tonight, hopeful its trial by flood and fire was ending, but warily on guard against an aftermath of disease.

The pitiless river was reluctantly falling, its slow recession measured in hundredths of a foot.

Drinking water was flowing in in quantities sufficient to meet the emergency needs of a long-thirsty populace.

Red Cross operatives were successfully alleviating the distress of 65,000 homeless.

The situation improved hourly.

The river sprawled over 12 square miles of the city, one-fifth of its area; $10,00,000 to $15,000,000 of damage had ben done.

Portsmouth Waters Recide.

Portsmouth, Ohio, Jan. 27 (AP).—Rehabilitation followed tonight in the wake of almost stationary or receding flood waters along the State's 380-mile Ohio River Valley disaster border.

From East Liverpool to Pomeroy the waters were falling. Down river from there to below Portsmouth a rise was measured in hundredths of a foot.

Sanitation and assurance of pure water provided the gravest problems. Relief agencies poured a steady stream of food, medical supplies and clothing into distressed areas for the 100,000 and more refugees.

To relieve a critical sanitation situation, Portsmouth sent a third trainload of 500 refugees to Columbus. Portsmouth, with 35,000 homeless, appropriated $200,000 to begin rehabilitation work. The river was rising slowly at Ironton toward a crest of 72 feet, a new record.

Indiana Crisis Continues.

Indianapolis, Jan. 27 (AP).—The Indiana National Guard today attacked a foe threatening the State's southern counties with famine, pestilence and death.

The guards' adversary was the raging Ohio River whose flood crest rolled on, engulfing some tiny towns and crushing larger cities.

Commanding officers along the front sent word they believed the river's fiercest onslaught was over. It stood stationary throughout the day from the Indiana-Ohio border for many miles down stream. It continued a rise at Evansville but John Hagan, Weather Bureau observer, revised downward his crest forecast. It neared 53 feet today and may crest at 53½ feet, Hagan said.

But throughout the valley there was still uncertainty. The fate of many marooned in homes was uncertain and no one knew what the receding water might reveal.

Senate Again Gets Measure to Extend Capitol Eastward

With the estimated cost raised $500,000, a bill to extend the East front of the Capitol in accordance with original plans was re-introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas.

The Texas Senator, who is chairman of the Committee of Public Buildings and Grounds, said that a restudy of the plans had indicated that the cost will be $4,000,000 instead of $3,500,000.

Long the dream of Capitol architects, the Capitol remodeling was approved last year by the Senate in passing the Connally bill but blocked by the House on account of the estimated cost.

Extension of the central portion of the Capitol eastward to complete the effect intended when the wings and dome were built has been under consideration since 1863, and has been recommended by every Capitol architect since that time.

2 Mail Fraud Sentences Commuted by Roosevelt

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday that President Roosevelt had commuted the sentences of Wilbur Foshay and H. H. Henley, of Minneapolis, Minn., making them eligible for parole at once. They now are serving 15 years in Leavenworth Penitentiary for fraudulent use of the mails.

Cummings said hundreds of persons had asked that the men's sentences be reduced and that on his recommendations the President lowered their sentences to five years.

Slight Change Shown In Condition of Pope

Vatican City, Jan. 27 (AP).—Pope Pius held to a slight surface improvement tonight, but Vatican sources said there was no change for the better in the fundamental ailments which have kept him in bed for more than seven weeks.

During the morning he suffered pain, but an official statement said he slept fairly well last night and carried out his usual morning program.

Food Sent for Zoo.

Detroit, Jan. 27 (AP).—John T. Millen, director of the Detroit Zoological Park, dispatched two tons of horse meat by truck today to save animals in the Cincinnati Zoo from starvation. Sol Stephan, zoo director at Cincinnati, had advised Millen no horse meat was available there and that because of floods all other meat was reserved for humans.

Citizen Unit Assails D. C. Fiscal Bill

A resolution protesting the Jacobs report on fiscal relations, calling it "unfair" and asking that Federal appropriations be increased to 30 per cent, has been adopted by the Southeast Citizens, in session at the Fifth Precinct Station House.

The association also adopted a resolution opposing any increase in gasoline or vehicle taxes, and stating that all taxes derived therefrom be used on the upkeep of highways and bridges.

The educational committee of the Association was ordered to attend a hearing at the Board of Education February 10, and attempt to secure for the Southeast section a vocational school on Potomac avenue between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets.

Red Cross Flood Relief Fund In Nation Goes to $1,222,182

In its drive for $10,000,000 for flood relief, the American Red Cross had collected $1,222,182 at noon yesterday.

Yesterday's contributions in the District of Columbia amounted to $18,870.56, bringing the total of contributions here to $55,786.66.

Contributoins received by The Washington Post yesterday amounted to $1,231.99, making the total received by this newspaper $4,379.09.

Forty cases of clothing were collected here and sent to the devastated area.

Among large contributions pouring into the Red Cross headquarters here was a check for $25,000 from Adolphus Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch Co., big brewing concern of St. Louis. Busch sent a telegram to Admiral Cary T. Grayson, Red Cross chairman, saying:

"Believing this is no time to hesitate, we are sending you our check for $25,000 for flood relief. Have also made today a contribution to midwest division, Red Cross, here."

Edward S. Harkness, of New York, sent a check for $10,000. Eddie Cantor sent one for $1,000, and asked Admiral Grayson, 'Can I be of fu ther help?" Amos and Andy forwarded a contribution of $200.

The total contributed i the first three days of the appeal amounted to more than the total for such a period in any previous relief fund drive by the Red Cross. Several chapters voluntarily doubled their quotas, as for example, Dayton, Ohio, which raised $80,000, after its quota had been set at $40,000. Cincinnati, still under water, doubled its quota and set its goal at $250,000. Youngstown, Ohio, and Memphis, Tenn., both doubled their quotas.

The Red Cross chapter at Hazard, Ky., obtained 50 times the quota asked for, sending in $20,000.

Father Francis Caffrey, of Gilroy, Calif., wired Admiral Grayson: "San Juan Bautista, Calif., mission community of 300 persons with quota of $30, raised $212 in nine hours; expect $300 by noon."

Mason E. Mitchell, chairman of the Conway, Ark., chapter, sent this message to Grayson: "Our people gratefully remember that the Red Cross sent $800 into Faulkner County in 1935 when we had our flood and we want to make that sum our quota."

The National Carbon Co., of New York, shipped 3,450 flashlights to Indianapolis and Cincinnati Red Cross headquarters, and also 22,500 battery cells.

130 Flood Dead Found in Single Louisville Area

lice, loosed for work by the influx of civil officers from dozens of cities, were only those on the very edge of the completely inundated districts. Upper stories of these houses were still above the high water level.

The people who died there were trapped, could not get away, never could summon aid, and illness and heart failure, plus exposure; lack of water, heat and light, finally took its toll.

Completely Under Water.

But beyond these sections are literally miles of small homes that are completely under water. No one can possibly guess, until the water goes down, what toll the surging brown flood took as it swept over the dwellings.

Many of the dead, all authorities agreed, never will be found. Some of them without ties, or people to look for them, possibly entire families, may have been swept from the roof-tops where they finally took their last refuge. The Ohio, now 10 and 15 miles wide in places, easily could have carried victims unnoticed hundreds of miles.

Even more desperate may have been the situation at Jeffersonville and New Albany, Ind., just across the swollen flood from Louisville. There relief was even later, confidence that the waters would not reach overwhelming levels was even greater, and tonight those cities had all but disappeared.

From an airplane today, cruising over the flood area, Jeffersonville and New Albany showed no signs of life, and water lapped over most of the house tops. The great brown waters spread 10 miles to the old water front of Louisville.

At Bowman Field, coming in, they said that $7,000 worth of embalming fluids had landed, gift from the Mayor of Philadelphia, whose police chief, with a squad of men, took over patrolling the eastern section of the city today. Rough wooden boxes were being carried across the pontoon bridge thrown across Beargrass Creek, once a rivulet now a half-mile wide river that cuts Louisville in half.

On the way in, exhausted workers told of 12 rescue boats, some of them carrying as high as ten persons, capsizing while trying to ferry the swift current of Beargrass. There were any number of tales of makeshift skiffs, handiwork of desperation, thrown frantically together from scraps of lumber and driftwood, collapsing when the despairing builders sought safety.

But into this grim picture, with its even more horrible possibilities, came several hopeful rays. The sun was bright, the weather mild, cutting deeply into dangers of pneumonia and influenza. There were medical supplies enough and food stations were feeding great lines of hungry. Authorities said there was ample food. There were no fires, such as made last night a setting of darkened terror against a frame of orange flame. Police enforced rigidly the "no smoking" rule in city streets where illuminating gas and fumes of gasoline were collecting.

Double Suicide Reported.

A double suicide was reported at Fortieth and Greenwood streets and another on West Market street. The water in both cases covered the floor of the two-storied buildings where the bodies were found.

Fire forces took over the streets above water in patrols, ready to meet any new emergency. There was even the possibility, as electric motors and generators came in with relief supplies, that some kind of light might be provided tonight in one small residential section.

Transit Strike Threat Is Ended in New York

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—A labor dispute that threatened to deprive 2,000,000 New Yorkers of their usual transportation facilities was cleared up at the conference table today.

The Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit Co., operating subway, elevated, surface and bus lines, principally in Brooklyn, agreed to reinstate two suspended employes, crux of the strike threat.

Troops Rush Plans to Move Refugees by Tomorrow Night

Roosevelt Orders Three Corps Areas to Prepare for Greatest Peace-Time Migration in History If Levees Crumble.

Cairo, particularly in the Memphis district.

"Col. Reybold, district engineer at Memphis, is fully organized for this purpose and believes the water now in sight can be carried through the district safely.

Must Be Prepared.

"The levee system will be strained, however, to the utmost and plans must immediately be perfected to evacuate the people in the threatened areas on both sides of the Mississippi River."

Reports from along the battle line showed extreme efforts under way to protect the levees at New Madrid, Mo.; Hickman, Ky.; Tiptonville, Tenn., and Mellwood, Ark., but there seemed little hope, the Associated Press said, of saving the Mellwood dike protecting thousands of acres south of Helena, Ark.

Thousands of refugees, perhaps as many as 150,000, already were being cared for at higher points back from the Mississippi. Memphis was caring for 6,500 and was preparing for 50,000.

Thousands of men were hastily sandbagging levees, but the Red Cross has warned residents in the lowlands of New Madrid and Tiptonville to leave. Many have done so, seeking safety on higher ground.

Reports yesterday that evacuation of the great expanse of lowlands had actually been ordered caused near-frenzy in places, it was reported, and protests in others. War Department officials immediately emphasized not a single person had been ordered evacuated yet, but that the plans were sufficiently comprehensive to include any along the 1,000-mile front who might be endangered during the coming week or more.

At New Orleans, the Associated Press said, the Army's plans to move residents from the entire Mississippi Valley were termed "ridiculous" by river experts.

Expert Attacks Plan.

Col. Lunsford E. Oliver, Vicksburg river district engineer, said the plan was "in error in that we are not expecting a superflood in the lower valley."

"It is absolutely ridiculous to contemplate any serious damage to Louisiana with the water now in sight," said Col. Harry Jacobs, chief engineer of the Louisiana State Board of Engineers.

It was estimated 35,000 motor cars would be needed in the evacuation plan if all the residents had to be removed at once, a "remote possibility," in the opinion of Gen. Craig. Railroad facilities would be utilized when needed and available.

Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, at Atlanta, in command of the Fourth Corps Area, reported to the War Department late yesterday that he had completed evacuation plans for his district, including Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana.

Ready for Emergency.

Maj. Gen. Stanley H. Ford, of the Seventh Corps Area, from Omaha, Nebr., said his men were ready for any emergency in the Missouri-Arkansas territory.

Maj. Gen. Herbert J. Breeks, of the Eighth Corps Area, at San Antonio, Tex., said he would be ready by today to care for the situation in Arkansas south of the Arkansas River.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt was receiving reports from heads of the agencies put in charge of the emergency relief work as soon as the Ohio River flood became serious.

Admiral Cary T. Grayson, chairman of the Red Cross, said there had been no new alarming developments during the day. The number of refugees was increasing with the total approaching the 1,000,000 mark.

Rescue work was being carried on in 179 counties in 9 States, with 198 relief camps in operation.

Crisis Due in Week.

Gen. Craig said the situations on the St. Francis and Little rivers were the worst in history, and that it would be a week before the crisis would be reached on the Mississippi.

Surg. Gen. Thomas Parran, Jr., of the Public Health Service, said health conditions in the stricken region were generally "excellent." He took exception to reports 200 pneumonia deaths had occurred in Louisville, laying them to misinterpretation of information released in Kentucky. He said he was informed the 200 total included drownings and all other deaths, and there was no evidence yet of any increase in pneumonia cases. No undue prevalence of disease as a result of the flood is expected, he said, because of the thorough preparations of health agencies to prevent epidemics.

Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, said that of the 50,000 WPA men aiding in the flood zone, 2,000 are working on the Cairo levees, with all manpower of the WPA at the disposal of the corps of engineers. He reported the agencies had reached agreement on the tremendous clean-up campaign that must be undertaken when the waters receded and preparations have been made to follow up the recession of the flood all the way down the river. The Public Health Service will be in charge.

Clean-Up Work Starts.

The clean-up work was actually begun in West Virginia yesterday, with 7,629 WPA men beginning the removal of debris, pumping of basements and various sanitation measures.

Flood stages as reported by Col. Harrington included:

Pittsburgh, 28 feet and falling; Huntington, 69 feet and falling slowly; Cincinnati, 79.6 feet and about stationary (the previous all-time record there was 71 feet and the present flood has touched 81 feet); Louisville, 81.1 feet and slowly rising with an additional foot rise possible (the old record was 75 feet); Evansville, 52.6 feet and rising, and Paducah, 59.2 feet and rising.

Weather conditions in the whole flood area "extremely favorable" to the rescue work, Walter Moxon, Weather Bureau flood forecasting expert, reported.

Sends More Boats.

Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, commander of the Coast Guard, said he had sent speeding toward the Mississippi, from the Gulf of Mexico, 100 additional boats capable of transporting 5,000 persons simultaneously. The Coast Guard already has 400 other boats in the flood area or on the way there.

Admiral Grayson reported the Red Cross appeal for funds had brought in $1,222,000 toward the present goal of $10,000,000.

Meanwhile, the Senate prepared to consider quickly the House-approved $790,000,000 relief bill from which funds will be made available for flood relief until the full cost can be determined and Congress can be asked to provide the amount. Senator Carter Glass, chairman, said the Appropriations Committee would take up the bill this afternoon.

Gang Figure Sentenced.

Prestonsburg, Ky., Jan. 27 (AP).—A jury in Floyd Circuit Court sentenced Noble Cole, accused of being a member of "The Black Legs" gang which terrorized Floyd and Magoffin Counties, to three years imprisonment on a charge of criminal syndicalism yesterday. Commonwealth's Attorney O. C. Hall indicated that 23 other men indicted with Cole will be tried at a later term of court.

Acton Convicted Of Manslaughter In Mursch Slaying

Deliberating almost 25 hours, a jury in District Court late yesterday convicted Frank H. Acton, former river boat guard, of manslaughter in connection with the slaying last October of Donald E. Mursch.

Testimony presented to the jury was to the effect that Acton and Mursch had been enemies for several months and that an argument between the two was precipitated when Acton charged Mursch with owing him a small amount of money.

The two met in a lunchroom at Eleventh and F streets southwest, and after an argument repaired to Mursch's car to settle their troubles. After several shots had been fired, Mursch dropped to the ground. Examination later showed he had been shot through the abdomen.

Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in District Court, ordered Acton detained in the District Jail. The maximum possible sentence is 3 to 15 years with a small fine.

U.S. Fraud Suit For 14 Million Is Upheld Here

By the Associated Press.

A Federal District Court justice upheld last night a $14,000,000 Government claim against a Swiss company for property the Government contended was fraudulently awarded in 1921 under the alien property act.

Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, in District Supreme Court, ruled that the Government was entitled to about $7,000,000 plus approximately $7,000,000 interest for property seized from and then returned to the Societe Suisse pour Valeur de Metaux.

Government attorneys said the property was composed of American Metal Co. stock, originally acquired by Metallgesellschaft, two German concerns, and transferred to the Swiss company, a subsidiary, shortly before the United States entered the World War.

After entry of this country into the war in 1917 the alien property custodian seized the securities.

Government attorneys said that on September 21, one day after the claim was filed, the alien property custodian, Thomas W. Miller, recommended it be paid, and on September 23 the then Attorney General, Harry M. Daugherty, approved the payment.

Subsequently, the Swiss company reopened the case by suing this Government for $680,000 past interest on the original $7,000,000. The Government counter-claimed that the original claim had been fraudulent.

Government attorneys said they traced liberty bonds which they said had been paid the Swiss Corporation in 1921 to a bank. Despite Daugherty's protests in 1927 that he did not own the bonds, Government counsel said, he had received liquidating dividends from the receiver of the bank up to 1935. They submitted exhibits they said showed Daugherty had taken an oath in 1930 that he was owner of proceeds from the bonds.

In reviewing this part of the evidence, O'Donoghue said:

"It is again a very strange thing that about $40,000 of these bonds are traced directly or indirectly, but with certainty, to the Attorney General Harry Daugherty and to the alien property custodian, Miller."

By the Associated Press.

Movie stars topped their own bosses and many businessmen in a list of 1935 salaries reported yesterday to Congress.

Greta Garbo's checks added up to $332,500. Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, her employer, likewise paid $211,858 to Clark Gable, $278,749 to Wallace Beery, $238,750 to William Powell, and $241,403 to Joan Crawford.

These figures were made public in a supplemental Treasury report upon salaries of $15,000 or more paid by corporations in 1935 or in fiscal years ended in 1936.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer salaries took up four of the more than 30 pages of the report and included 71 of $50,000 or more to movie stars, writers and officials.

Excepting the movie industry, the biggest sum reported was $193,128, received by G. W. Mason, president of the Kelvinator Refrigerator Co., of Detroit.

Next were $134,774 for James H. Rand, jr., of Buffalo, president of Remington Rand, Inc., and $119,774 for Edward C. Stone of Lexington, Mass., general manager of the United States branch of the Employers Liability Insurance Co.

Among the prominent individuals in the higher brackets was William Hamm, jr., St. Paul brewer, kidnaped several years ago by the Barker-Karpis gang.

He received $42,500 as president of the Theo. Hamm Brewing Co.

Some of the salaries reported for the firm of Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., Ltd., of Hollywood, were: $782,000 to Samuel Goldwyn, president; $150,000 to Eddie Cantor; $174,416 to Miriam Hopkins, and $78,000 to Joel McRae.

M. G. M.'s highest paid director was David O. Selznick, who drew $194,000.

These additional stars got $100,000 or more from the same company: Lionel Barrymore, Constance Bennett, Jack Benny, Clarence Brown, Ronald Colman, Ann Harding, Jean Harlow the Marx brothers Jeannette McDonald and Robert Motgomery.

Burton Holmes Talks on Land Of the Swiss

Tour of Switzerland Holds Interest of Audience in Roosevelt Auditorium.

"SWITZERLAND," Third of five travel talks by Burton Holmes, illustrated with his own still and motion pictures. Slide coloring by Mildred Petrie. At the Roosevelt High School, under the auspices of the Community Center Department. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

Not a real tour, but a rambling jaunt around picturesque Switzerland was vicariously made last evening as Burton Holmes offered the third of his current series of five travel talks in the Theodore Roosevelt High School Auditorium before an audience of near-capacity proportions.

Everything connoted by the name of Switzerland came within the purview of last night's audience, with the traveling made for the purpose of seeing things and scenes rather than getting to a specific destination.

A little look here, a short trip there, some retracing via the motion picture camera here and there—and you have a delightful, informal trip of sheer beauty.

Lucerne First Stop.

The first major stop was Lucerne, with view of that famed leonine memorial to the Swiss Guards of Louis XVI and the chapel marking the spot where Astrid, Queen of the Belgians, was killed. Then a lumbering trip around Lake Lucerne, and the territory made memorable by Wilhelm Tell.

And before the final curtain came down, San Moritz and its colorful variety of winter sports; Zurich, and the Swiss (pleasure) navy; Berne, without any pictures of the well known bears, and Geneva, with its uncompleted League of Nations Palace, all passed in cursory review.

Alps Dominate Scene.

Interesting as were the buildings, of old and new design, dominant, of course, were the Alps, for a travelogue of Switzerland without the Alps, while actually possible, would be entirely incomplete. But three of the many peaks mentioned stand out, as they always do: the stately Jungfrau, the romantically grand Mont Blanc, and the statically dramatic Matterhorn. In these three noble, mighty examples of Nature's handiwork are centered the spirit of the Alps.

Switzerland's lakes, of Maxfield Parrish azure, and unalpine countrysides, carpeted by crops and flowers, had their moments of prominence.

Fourth in the series of travel-talks, "All Over France," will be offered next Wednesday evening.

'Father' of AAA Demands New Crop Measure

By the Associated Press.

A Southern legislator demanded new crop control legislation yesterday when the House Agriculture Committee began a hearing on a proposed $500,000,000 loan fund to help tenants buy farms.

Representative Fulmer (Democrat), South Carolina, who fathered the invalidated AAA, said he had asked the Department of Agriculture to draft a new control bill. It would contain, he said, "the best features of the old AAA."

"I, as well as many other Congressmen interested in agriculture, believe," he added, "that a control act meeting objections of the Supreme Court can be written."

At the initial hearing on the Bankhead-Jones tenancy bill several committee members argued agriculture should be placed on a "stable basis." Producers should be guaranteed "parity prices" with industry, before long-time, low-interest loans are made available to tenants, they held.

A New England Republican—Representative Tobey, of New Hampshire—suggested the tenancy bill would be "Love's labor lost if we didn't do something to guarantee farmers a price on which they could live and meet their obligations." Wilson Gee, professor of rural economics at the University of Virginia, told the committee he favored the objectives of the old AAA, but suggested the farm tenancy problem be kept separate from that of price control.

J. F. Jackson, of Savannah, Ga., like Gee a representative of the Association of Southern Agricultural Workers, suggested loans be made available only to farmers who had shown managerial ability and "the character to save."

Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, said the committee would study a report on farm tenancy being prepared by a special committee named by President Roosevelt, expected about February 1, before completing hearings on the bill.

Millard F. Hudson, Federal Aide, Dies

Millard Fillmore Hudson, for many years a member of the staff of the Federal Trade Commission and for ten years president of the National Theosophic Temple Association, died yesterday afternoon at Emergency Hospital. He was 76.

He was born in Mount Pleasant, Indiana, September 9, 1861. He studied law at Missouri State University, and received his LL.B. degree in 1883. After residing in California and Iowa, he came to Washington in 1907 as secretary to the late United States Senator Francis C. Newlands, of Nevada.

He made his home at Brookmont, Md. Funeral services will be held from Lee's Chapel, Fourth street and Massachusetts avenue northeast, at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

Maj. Walter A. Newman Rites Set Tomorrow

A retired doctor, Maj. Newman was one of the founders of the Virginia Medical Society. He received his commission as major for his services in the World War.

Interment at Haymarket, Va., will follow the services.

Armed Defense Held Best Curb On Radicalism

Women's Patriotic Session Speakers Beg Nation to 'Stem Red Tide.'

Activities of college boys and girls interested in world peace represent "an attempt by the Communist Party to gain a hold on the youth of America," a University of Pennsylvania undergraduate told the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense yesterday.

The speaker, James L. Layton, jr., expressed the belief, however, that the campus is not fertile soil for radicalism. To stem the red tide, he urged better understanding of the purposes of the Reserve Officers Training Corps.

"The R. O. T. C. is worthy of support," said Layton, a member of the Third Regiment at the University of Pennsylvania. "It is true Americanism. Support the R. O. T. C. and help ring the death knell of Communism on the campus."

Senator Walsh Speaks.

At the same session of the Hotel Mayflower meeting, which has brought 800 women here from every State in the Union, Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, also warned against the "stealthy and subtle strategy" of Communism.

He recommended the maintenance and support of an adequate national defense and said stress should be laid on building up the personnel of the Navy rather than on the number and type of naval vessels. The naval reserve force is inadequate in comparison with the size of the Navy, he asserted.

The contribution of the Marine Corps to National defense was the subject of an address by Maj. Gen. Commandant Thomas Holcomb. The Navy's role was outlined by Rear Admiral A. W. Johnson, member of the General Board.

Other speakers yesterday were Representative Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois; Brig. Gen. Walter Krueger, chief of war plans, War Department; Representative Lister Hill, of Alabama; Col. Edmund L. Gruber, general staff corps, War Department; Capt. Royal E. Ingersoll, chief of war plans, Navy Department, and Maj. Gen. Charles H. Lyman, commandant, Quantico Marine Barracks.

Closes Today.

At the final session this morning the speaker will be Representative Virginia E. Jenckes, of Indiana; Lieut. Col. Frank E. Lowe, C. C. Thompson, Howard Phillip Allen and Miss Billie Murray.

The delegates heard an impassioned plea for defense and enactment of the universal service bill from Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma.

"In the past," cried Lee, "we had to beg for money while we commanded men. There is no reason why we should be able to take one man's life in a National emergency, and not another's property."

Carroll T. Moore Is Dead in Idaho

Later he went to Pullman Agriculture College in Washington State and became a homesteader in the Clearwater Valley of Idaho.

He was a member of the board of education and an elder in the Community Church at Kamiah. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lou Crackel Moore, and five children, all of Idaho; his mother, two sisters and a brother, of this city. A third sister lives in Chicago.

Germana Pacifist Gets Nobel Prize by Proxy

Oslo, Norway, Jan. 27 (AP).—Mrs. Alexandra Kreutzberger, representative of Carl von Ossietsky, collected the $37,000 Nobel Peace Prize for the invalid German pacifist today.

(Berlin reports said a trustee probably would be appointed to administer the funds for Von Ossietsky, who spent three years in a concentration camp before his release last year, to prevent his leaving Germany or engaging in anti-Nazi activity.)

Prospects Fade For Trade Pact With England

By Franklyn Waltman.

Prospects for a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and Great Britain diminished somewhat yesterday when Walter Runciman, chairman of the British Board of Trade, left Washington without making any commitments in that respect.

He indicated further conversations were necessary before any formal negotiations could be undertaken. Hope still prevailed in State Department circles, however, that an Anglo-American trade pact would result from the visit of the British minister here this week.

Runciman was a week-end guest at the White House and he and the President thoroughly canvassed the general economic situation of the world and the trade relations between their two countries. Subsequently the British minister had several conversations with Secretary of State Corwell Hull and Assis-tant Secretary of State Francis B. Bayre, in charge of trade agreements. All said they had agreed in principle, but were leaving specific details to trade experts.

Prolonged Stay Here.

Due to the fact that Runciman prolonged his scheduled stay here in order to carry on conversations with Secretary Hull, it was believed earlier in the week formal negotiations of a trade agreement would be announced before he departed. For that reason his departure without such an announcement was regarded as disappointing.

It may be, as suggested in one quarter, the British minister wishes to consult his cabinet colleagues in London and lay before them the result of his talks with the President and Secretary Hull before formally committing his government to formal negotiations.

Shortly before he left the city for New York, where he will sail today directly for England, Runciman directed the British Embassy to issue the following statement:

"During Mr. Runciman's visit to Washington he has been able to have an exchange of views on various topics with President Roosevelt and Mr. Cordell Hull. On trade matters, he has taken the opportunity to have a general discussion with Mr. Hull and Mr. Sayre, but further exploration will be necessary before it can be determined whether there is a firm basis upon which detailed negotiations can take place for a reciprocal trade agreement."

In statements regarding the Hull reciprocal trade agreements the word "negotiations" has a very precise and technical meaning. Actually Runciman and the American officials have been engaged this week in negotiations, using that term loosely.

To Exchange Views.

The reciprocal trade agreements act, however, provides that before formal negotiation of a trade agreement is undertaken public notice must be given in order that all those who might be affected will have an opportunity to prepare their views.

No notice of "negotiation" of an Anglo-American trade agreement has been given and therefore officialdom shies sharply away from that word in respect to the Roosevelt-Hull-Runciman conversations. It is understood, however, that within the near future British and American trade experts will exchange views and discuss possible points of agreement. This was what Runciman meant when he said in his statement that "further exploration will be necessary" before "detailed negotiations" can be announced.

Mining Group Assails Revenue Act of 1936

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—The American Mining Congress, concluding its thirty-ninth annual meeting today, passed resolutions demanding a return of the flat rate corporation tax and condemning provisions of the 1936 revenue act.

It deplored "any movement tending to impair the authority or independence of the judiciary" and urged the Government to "retire from business in competition with its citizens."

France, Turkey Agree On Military District

Geneva, Jan. 27 (AP).—France and Turkey agreed today to establishment of the Sanjak (military district) of Alexandretta as a separate entity with full independence from Syria in internal affairs.

The negotiations ended a crisis that for a time threatened relations between France and Turkey. Turkey and demanded the Sunjak be made an autonomous state when Syria, now a French mandate, becomes independent in 1939.

'Fed Up' Sailor, 25, Offers Life For $1,500 and Time to Ponder

Sailor for sale!

Young man, who will be 25 in March and is more than 6 feet tall, with blond hair and gray eyes that have seen almost every country on the globe, will forfeit his destiny—even his life—to any one willing to pay him $1,500 and allow him three months before taking charge. Persons interested get in touch with John Anderson, jr., 606 Fifth street northwest.

The "merchandise" himself, a bit embarrassed, sat across a rickety table and dictated the terms of the offer. Later, with economy of words, he told why he had decided to put himself on sale.

"I've been all over the world," he said. "I've seen all I want to see. I'm fed up with life in general, and long for something different. I don't care what happens to me."

He revealed, incidentally, he is a member of the International Seamen's Union, and had come to Washington from New York with fellow seamen to protest against the recently introduced Copeland bill, designed for "safety at sea."

Born in Boston, he left high school at 16 for the sea, he said. Since then, he has been around the world more times than he can remember and wouldn't care if he never boarded another boat. He had just returned from a 30-day voyage to South Africa when he decided to join the group "heading here to picket for the Seamen's Union—against the Copeland bill."

It's a depresing business, he has discovered, and the experience has about crystallized his vague feeling that, if life has anything to offer, he doesn't know what it is.

The $1,500 would go, he said, "to my old man in Boston. He has been having a pretty tough time for the last two or three years, and I haven't been able to help him and my mother much since I left home." He would like three months before giving himself to a buyer, he explained, "just to think things over."

He wonders if someone would like to have a life-time chauffeur (he has had experience in that line) or a mechanic "for some thrilling kind of work." He wonders, also, if some doctor, experimentally inclined, would like to buy him as a "guinea pig."

In the last three months he has had two offers for jobs, but couldn't accept the first, and didn't want the second. In South Africa, he was offered a job in the gold mines, "but didn't have $100 handy to pay the 'head tax' required of workmen there." In Washington, last week, while he was picketing at the Department of Commerce Building, a man approached and offered him a job as quartermaster on a yacht. "It didn't appeal to me," he said. "I want something different, something exciting—even if it means my life. And I want $1,500 to give my parents."

He expects to be in Washington, with the other seamen, "until something is done about the Copeland bill."

House Gets Bill To End District Death Sentence

Rep. Kvale Also Presents Measure to Restrict Teachers' Work.

Bills to abolish capital punishment in the District and restrict the outside activities of Washington school teachers were reintroduced in the House yesterday by Representative Kvale (Farmer-Laborite), Minnesota.

The measure which seeks to abolish death by the electric chair in the National Capital specifies that the penalty for first degree murder would be life imprisonment; for second degree murder, imprisonment in excess of 20 years; for rape of a minor, imprisonment of from 5 to 30 years.

Restriction of outside work by school teachers and officials is sought only for those receiving $2,000 a year or more.

The Kvale bill would bar them from engaging in any profession, business or occupation for profit "if his position as employe of the Board of Education (a) tends, directly or indirectly, to enhance his prestige in, or increase his income from" the extra-school job; (b) enables him "to exert influence in favor of his patrons, clients or pupils; or (c) "causes any person to become his patron, client or pupil for the reason that the likelihood of appointment or promotion of such person to a position in the public schools (or in the Government of the District of Columbia) will be enhanced thereby."

Both measures were referred to the House District Committee.

Canadian Premier Hits Peace Parley

Ottawa, Jan. 27 (AP).—Premier MacKenzie King today opposed a motion in the House of Commons that President Roosevelt be asked to call a world conference for peace.

The Premier said President Roosevelt had the cause of peace at heart and no doubt had considered the idea of such a conference, but advice from one country to another on its policies was never welcome and seldom given.

Daughter Gets W. B. Hibbs' Entire Estate

Broker Creates Trust for Mrs. H. H. Clegg; Value Not Shown in Will.

William Beale Hibbs, senior partner in the brokerage firm of W. B. Hibbs & Co., who died January 21, left his entire estate in trust for the benefit of his daughter, Mrs. Helen Hibbs Clegg, it was shown in District Court yesterday when his will was filed.

Asking that the American Security & Trust Co., and John S. Flannery, an attorney, be made co-executors of the trust he created, Mr. Hibbs asked that the income be paid to his daughter for her life. After her death, the income will go to her lineal descendants until 20 years after the death of the last descendant who was living at Mr. Hibbs' death.

Then the principal will be given Mrs. Clegg's descendants. Should she have no descendants at that time, the principal is to go to her heirs at law.

In another portion of the will Mr. Hibbs stipulated that his share in the brokerage business should be held by members of the firm until such time (within two years) as they can dispose of it without embarrassment to the firm.

Mother to Get Home Training In Infant Case

Parents of Child Left in Automobile Called 'Thoughtless.'

The case of 8-month-old Franklin Moore, jr., whose parents left him locked in an automobile while they attended a picture show, has been continued for three months, during which his mother is to receive guidance from the board of public welfare and other agencies on the care of the child.

In agreement with Defense Attorney Earl Davis and Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward M. Welliver, Judge Fay Bentley made this decision yesterday, following a two-hour hearing at the Juvenile Court on a petition from the Police Women's Bureau that the child was destitute of a suitable home.

After hearing a dozen witnesses, Judge Bentley averred she did not believe the case was one "of willful negligence" but that the parents were merely thoughtless and that the mother needed guidance in caring for her child.

The 26-year-old mother, bewildered and nervous, testified she had left the show to feed the baby and see that it was all right not more than 20 minutes before a citizen heard the child crying in the locked car and summoned a policeman, L. G. Ellis, doorman at the theater, testified he had given Mrs. Moore a pass to leave the theater and return later.

The father, a WPA worker employed at the Smithsonian Institution at $73 a month, took the stand and said that he and his wife had done everything possible, considering their circumstances, to take care of the child properly.

While character witnesses for Moore testified that Moore was a sober, industrious man and a good worker, it was brought out he had been married twice before, and had served 20 months in the Michigan State Reformatory for desertion of his second wife and three children.

U. S. Mediator Settles Strike At Glass Firm

Solution Drawn by Lind Accepted by Union, Libbey-Owens.

By the Associated Press.

Toledo, Ohio, Jan. 27.—The six weeks strike of 7,100 employes of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co. ended late today with approval by the union committee and company officials of a wage agreement giving a flat eight-cent an hour increase in all plants of the company.

Settlement came when the company and the union approved a solution drawn by Ralph Lind, Federal mediator.

The increase brings the average rate for employes of the company to 89.8 an hour. Company officials said the addition to the annual pay roll will be $980,000.

Lind's proposal provides appointment of a committee of five to investigate wage rates of the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. with a view to establish uniformity of rates throughout the flat glass industry.

U.A.W. Officer Hints at Calling Chrysler Strike

Labor Espionage Is 'Worse Than Dope-Peddling,' He Charges.

By Sidney Olson.

Richard T. Frankensteen, of Detroit, organizer and executive board member of the United Automobile Workers of America, yesterday threatened by implication to call 16,000 Chrysler Corporation employes off their jobs "unless the use of stoolpigeons in the plants is discontinued."

Testifying before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, Frankensteen turned in his seat to emphasize that his remarks were directed at Herman L. Weckler, vice president of De Soto, Chrysler subsidiary, and former Chrysler labor relations head. Then Frankensteen said:

"I speak for a majority of Chrysler employes, and you know I do. And I say that these employes won't work for a business where labor spies are tolerated as fellow workers."

"Worse Than Dope Peddlers."

Frankensteen's blunt pronouncement featured a day of colorful testimony. At one point he asserted that "men like Weckler and K. T. Keller, president of Chrysler Corporation, who pass as decent citizens, are worse than dope peddlers."

At another point, Virgil Mazza, confessed labor spy for Corporation Auxiliary Co., said of I. Miller Bros. shoe factory, in New York, "I say it is the prison. That's what we call it—the prison—a regular Sing Sing. The only thing they haven't got is the electric chair."

With the committee chairman, Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, ill with a cold, the other member of the investigating body, Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, presided at the sessions.

Dan G. Ross, general manager of the Corporation Auxiliary Co., allegedly a labor espionage service whose biggest client is Chrysler Corporation, testified Frankensteen had worked for Dodge Corporation, a Chrysler subsidiary, for ten years and that Frankensteen's father had worked for the same company for many years before that.

Calls "Best Friend" Spy.

Gradually out of testimony was unfolded a story of how Frankensteen's "best friend," a man named John C. Andrews, was paid $40 monthly plus expenses by the Corporation Auxilliary Co. to spy on Frankensteen's union activities through their constant association and friendship, according to sworn testimony by Ross, Weckler and Frankensteen himself.

The latter, a burly 240-pound young man with a jutting jaw and massive shoulders, a former tackle on the University of Dayton's football team, testified he had been a "trimmer" in the Dodge plant for ten years; that he "knew Andrews intimately" and "thought him a very fine fellow;" and that Andrews, officer of a paint union local, "was a very militant union man, always urging strikes and violence."

Posed as Millionaire.

Frankensteen said Andrews engineered a vacation at a nearby lake for their two families during a layoff period; that their wives shopped and went to movies together; that Andrews introduced him to a "Mr. Bath," a C. A. company spy at the lake, who posed as Andrews' "uncle," who supposedly was a millionaire play producer.

Ross had testified Bath had spent $1,100 on the vacation investigation of Frankensteen, and was now stationed in the Toronto, Canada, office of the company. Bath, although supenaed by the committee, has not appeared as yet.

Frankensteen said of Bath's spending: "He wouldn't let us spend a penny. He'd say: 'I've made mine and everything is on me.' . . . Once he took us to a roadhouse and bought us champagne, and once to an operetta at Navin Field in Detroit. He bought toys for the children. . . . Once we had them out to dinner . . . I wish we'd put arsenic in the food now."

He told how Andrews was in the forefront of the labor movement in the Chrysler plant, was present at nearly all executive council sessions, and stood in picket lines. But Frankensteen repudiated Andrews' expense accounts, as spread in the records, saying: "He never bought me more than a coca cola in his life. We paid all his gas expenses when he drove us to union meetings or other places. He padded his expense accounts, and billed the Corporation Auxiliary company for gas too, I see."

The last time Frankensteen saw Andrews, he said, was just before election night last fall. He said Andrews had bet on Landon, "while I bet on Roosevelt. But he disappeared, and I haven't seen him since, nor the bet either."

Gives List of "Spies."

Frankensteen then named a number of men whom he termed "spies," and from whom he presented what he said were signed confessions.

During the afternoon Frankenteen went on with his testimony, submitting a dud tear gas bomb to the committee in support of his inference that "Briggs Motor Body service men threw it into a peaceful picket mob in order to incite violence and riot." He said the Briggs service men "are one of the most vicious groups in the country in this particular—spying."

Senator Thomas asked Ross, Weckler, Frankensteen and James Smith, president of the Corporation Auxiliary Co., for opinions on the necessity of espionage in industry. Weckler held it "very essential to the operation of a plant," and Smith and Ross agreed.

Finds No Shame.

When Senator Thomas asked Smith: "Do you think a spy suffers from his work?" Smith replied: "I hope not."

Thomas asked: "Then there is nothing to be ashamed of in the spy business?"

Smith answered, "I don't think so."

Attorney M. Mendelssohn, for Smith, protested to Senator Thomas the publication of the name of Operative H-72, described the day before as a "very efficient spy" in Detroit, helpful in breaking up the Chrysler local of the Society of Designing Engineers, a draftsmen's union. The name was entered into the record, nevertheless, as William H. Eckert.

Catholic University Awards Degree to Brazilian Diplomat

Honorary LL. D. Conferred on Dr. Soares, Former Minister of Foreign Relations, by Rt. Rev. Patrick J. McCormick.

Catholic University yesterday honored Jose Carlos de Macedo Soares, former Minister of Foreign Relations of Brazil, by awarding him the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

Dr. Soares, who attended the second inaugural of President Roosevelt as an ambassador from his country, received the degree at a special convocation in McMahon Hall on the university campus. The degree was conferred by the Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, pro-chancellor, who acted for the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the university, absent because of illness.

In the citation of Dr. Soares the pro-chancellor said:

"It is well known that the commercial and social ties existing between the South American republics and the United States of America are both numerous and binding. For the republics of the Southern Hemisphere and the United States are neighboring nations; they find a common interest in promoting their mutual welfare; they stand united against all interference from without. It is therefore a matter of rejoicing for the Catholic University of America to be able to confer a degree on a prominent citizen of Brazil, that flourishing center of arts and culture, of law and liberty. In conferring this academic honor on our distinguished candidate, we greet in his person the people of Brazil, and indeed the peoples of all the South American republics.

"Recently a treaty of friendship was signed by the nations of South America and our own country. The ceremony that we are now witnessing we are glad to interpret as a happy omen of lasting peace and harmony between them. There stands before you today a man, exemplary in his efforts for the establishment of peace; a man of varied gifts, equally expert in jurisprudence and in business administration; a leader among his fellow-citizens; an experienced diplomat; a statesman with a long record of service to his country; and—if we may be permitted a prophecy—one who is marked for even greater eminence. In his many publications on a variety of subjects, he constantly acknowledges and proclaims the great indebtedness, both in the past and in the present, of his own country and of all the sister nations of Latin America to the Church."

Addresses were made by Sumner Welles, Assistant Secretary of State; Dr. Soares and Pro-chancellor McCormick. A reception for Dr. Soares followed the exercises.

Welles said that Dr. Soares should be considered "an outstanding statesman of all the Americas."

The Assistant Secretary said he believes that peaceful relations now existing between Bolivia and Paraguay are "owing perhaps as much to Dr. Soares as to any other man. We in the Americas know the great work he has done. We appreciate his lofty idealism and his very practical announcements."

In his response after receiving the degree Dr. Soares said:

"The ideals of America will have to be in the first place the unity of its Christian civilization — from Greenland to the extreme limits of Patagonia.

"The ideal in America is liberty—as great, as vast, as profound as is permitted by another excellent ideal—that which is encompassed by the formal principles of Jesus Christ. Consequently, the policy of America can never be that of an egotistic and material interest, being, as it is, the vocation of liberty within the principles of Christian feeling."

Miss Perkins Seeks Passage Of Subpena Act of property in Anderson" to arouse opinion against the union.

It charged that on Monday night of this week a mob led by employes of the company had wrecked offices of the union at Anderson and had beaten a union leader into unconsciousness while policemen held him.

Plants "Held for Ransom."

The General Motors notice to its employes repeated that the company would negotiate with the union whenever the "sit-down" strikers left the company plants at Flint, Mich. Of the charge that it evaded its "moral obligation" the company said:

"You know this is not true. So why all these charges? Simply because we refuse to negotiate with a group that holds our plants for ransom without regard to law or justice."

Referring to Lewis the statement said:

"The lelader of this group has, as you know, publicly stated that hours, wages and conditions of employment are not involved. Now what is involved? It is this. That we turn you over, body and soul, for exploitation. This is demonstrated by the demand that they be given the exclusive privilege of acting as representatives of all our workers regardless of your desires. This has always been perfectly clear.

"I say to you once more, have no fear. Do not be misled. General Motors will never let you down."

It was signed by Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, who on Monday night had refused Secretary Perkins' invitation to meet her yesterday along with representatives of the strikers.

40,000 Back at Jobs.

Detroit, Jan. 27 (AP).—Nearly 40,000 automotive workers anticipating their first pay check in three weeks returned to jobs in 10 Chevrolet plants of General Motors Corporation today without disorder or interference. Another 5,900, in Michigan Fisher Body plants, follow them tomorrow.

Five United Automobile agencies were held in "protective custody" by Saginaw, Mich., police after clashes of unionized and nonunion men in which no one was hurt.

Picket lines of the United Automobile Workers of America, active outside some of the strike-closed plants of the Nation's biggest automobile producer, were absent as the Chevrolet employes returned to what M. E. Coyle, general manager, said probably would be a minimum of two days' employment a week.

The resumption of operations in the plants at Muncie and Indianapolis, Ind., and Detroit, Flint, Saginaw and Bay City, Mich., had no effect in the continuing decline in car production. Assembly lines in a majority of General Motors plants remain idle because of lack of bodies ordinarily produced in Fisher plants, where strikes have occurred.

Insurance Protected.

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—General Motors Corporation announced today it would act to protect group life insurance of thousands of its employes who are idle because of strikes by making the necessary payments to keep policies in force Strikers and nonstrikers will be protected.

In making the announcement, William S Knudsen, executive vice president, said that for employes who desire to continue their insurance ofter returning to work arrangements would be made for repayments of the amounts advanced.

Not Very Convincing.

President Roosevelt's decision to discontinue conferences relating to power pooling in the Tennessee Valley is allegedly due to the issuance of a sweeping preliminary injunction against the TVA obtained by 19 companies, some of them participants in the September conference.

This explanation is not very convincing, in view of the fact that the petition for the injunction had been filed before the September conference was called. Moreover, representatives of the power companies stated at that time that the litigation would not be abandoned, as the utilities wished to protect themselves against duplication of their facilities pending final decision as to the constitutionality of the TVA itself.

The circumstantial evidence indicates that the President has experienced a change of heart and has decided to abandon efforts to reach a solution of the power problem in co-operation with the private utilities. This inference is strengthened by the knowledge that the Administration is confronted by a controversy within its own ranks. On the one hand are Senator Norris and David Lilienthal who believe in a rigid application of the "yardstick" theory, and on the other those who agree with Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of TVA, that co-operation between publicly and privately owned utilities is highly important.

Last fall the President was obviously leaning toward the Morgan viewpoint. Today the brusque decisiveness with which he has announced discontinuance of conferences will undoubtedly encourage uncompromising advocates of public ownership who believe that it is dangerous, or at least futile, to negotiate with the private utilities.

If the President should decide to follow the Norris-Lilienthal lead and rely upon competitive pressure to bring private utility managements into line, it will, of course, be essential to lay down rules for the guidance of the publicly owned enterprises.

The TVA, for instance, is in a very powerful strategic position to wage a destructive competitive warfare upon private utilities. If public and private ownership are to exist side by side, it is essential to provide safeguards against unfair and oppressive tactics that would force private interests to capitulate to a superior force. If it is determined to establish public ownership of power projects in any given area, it should be done by acquiring competing private property at a fair valuation, not by waging unequal competition and then taking it over at bankrupt prices.

Discussion of these and many other important questions are involved in all proposals for pooling power or transmission facilities. If the TVA and the private utilities cannot agree upon a co-operative plan of action, proposals to pool resources need not be abandoned as impractical. In that case, as Dr. Morgan suggests, the possibilities of a power pool might be explored by disinterested and impartial experts.

The President's excuse for breaking off negotiations savors too much of the tactics of a participant in a contest sparring for advantage instead of seeking for a peace formula.

When The Waters Recede.

To people driven from their homes by devastating floods the future seems so dark that it is hard to find any silver lining to the clouds that veil it. However, it is some consolation to know that this year the return journey will be made easier for large numbers by the knowledge that jobs await them.

Material disasters do not destroy, they merely stimulate activity in communities having the resources with which to make a fresh start. In those now stricken towns and cities which have been expanding their industrial activities as recovery progressed, the work of rehabilitation will go on alongside that provided by the normal occupations of the residents.

The situation is very different from that confronting the people of a ravaged area with nothing to fall back upon and no markets to which they may send the products of their labor. It is quite different, too, from the conditions created by natural disasters that completely destroy the habitability of the regions affected. The Ohio River Valley and other flood-stricken regions are set back, but permanently impoverished, by disastrous floods. And therein lies a danger as well as a consolation.

The danger is that people may forget that where waters have once been they will come again unless in the meantime steps are taken to combat and correct the conditions that underlie the present disaster. The resilience of our people, the tenacity with which they cling to familiar surroundings, is a priceless national asset which must not be made an excuse for fatalistic acceptance of catastrophes largely of our own making.

Toward Real Disarmament.

There was much actual and even more potential value in the conversations held here between President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Mr. Walter Runciman, whose position in the British cabinet corresponds roughly with that of our Secretary of Commerce.

An agreement in principle has been reached to negotiate an Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement. That in itself is a development with broad ramifications. It foreshadows, for instance, Administration opposition to rigid mandatory neutrality legislation. The British have before this let it be known that if war is to close down vital Anglo-American trade they would prefer to terminate their dependence on our cotton and other raw materials in advance. That would mean concentration on imperial preference and relegation of the proposed trade agreement with this country to the discard.

On the other hand the advantages of the proposed trade agreement to both sides are obvious. For the United States it would place the capstone on the arch of Secretary Hull's efforts to break the log-jam of trade. With no other nation except Canada is our commerce, year in and year out, greater than with Great Britain. For the British, also, such a pact could be decidedly beneficial. Britain's recovery from the depression has been more rapid and extensive than our own. But foreign trade, inevitably the foundation of British prosperity, lags considerably behind domestic improvement. It constitutes the darkest spot in the British economic picture.

But significant as a reciprocal trade agreement would be so far as Anglo-American economic relations are concerned, its importance would go far beyond that. Indeed, when seen in their broad setting the Runciman-Roosevelt discussions have a world importance. These conversations are clearly part of a growing movement in the direction of economic disarmament which, if successful, may do more than any other existing force to stem the tide toward war.

The sequence of significant events is clear. The first important step in mutually constructive Anglo-American collaboration occurred at the time of the French currency crisis last autumn. Then Great Britain and the United States, together with France, reached a tripartite "gentlemen's agreement" for monetary stabilization.

Since then M. Georges Bonnet, onetime French Minister of Commerce and Finance and an advocate of the economic approach to the solution of political problems, has been appointed Ambassador to the United States. This week the Council of the League of Nations is formally naming Henry F. Grady as American member of the League's Economic Committee. The committee is addressing itself to a survey of the vital problem of raw materials, strongly sponsored by M. Bonnet, with a view to removing impediments now blocking their free flow in the channels of world commerce. The appointment of Dr. Grady, until recently chief of the trade agreements division of the Department of State, indicates the importance attached by the Roosevelt Administration to this co-operative effort.

All these and related developments taken together point to the idea that the three great democracies, which also happen to be the great financial and economic powers, are moving toward regularized collaboration in the solution of nonpolitical problems. There can be no doubt whatever that world economic improvement will prove of great benefit to us. And, if such economic appeasement leads, as it easily may, to the lifting of the war clouds, the benefit will be emphasized.

The United States has a tremendous stake in world peace. Any major disturbance, even if it does not involve us directly, is bound to have an extremely depressing effect on our economy. In a time of mounting fears, increasing confusion and that growing defeatism which is not the least disturbing aspect of the times, a very salutary development is the assumption of leadership by the great democracies in the move toward economic disarmament. Without that, military and naval disarmament will remain an illusion.

Ignoring The Public Interest.

In voting its opposition to a small-claims court for Washington the District Bar Association rejected the advice of both its board of directors and its special committee on the Municipal Court. Those groups, after carefully studying Judge Nathan Cayton's plan, decided unanimously that the proposed poor man's court should be established. But a majority of the lawyers assembled Tuesday night turned it down after a technical discussion which largely ignored the merits of the plan.

No reason for this adherence to an extremely narrow viewpoint has been offered the public. All that the community knows is that the Bar Association, against the advice of its leaders, apparently, opposes a plan to extend justice to people too poor to hire a lawyer. There is an unfortunate implication that at least some of those present were influenced by selfish motives. If there are other explanations for the attitude taken, the association cannot too quickly make them known.

Unless the Bar Association can show some compelling reason why Judge Cayton's proposal should not be adopted, the vote may stand merely as a reflection upon its own public spirit. The expression of opinion was only advisory in character. The decision as to whether a poor man's court shall be set up here rests with the Municipal Court judges, who are in no way responsible to the Bar Association. In the minds of these judges, more interested in the community welfare than in lawyers' fees, the advice of the two legal groups who have studied the plan in detail will doubtless count for a great deal more than the hasty reaction of lawyers perhaps not wholly familiar with it.

It seems quite probable, therefore, that the court will organize a small-claims branch without the blessing of the bar. If it should decline to do so, the issue should be carried immediately to Congress. Senator King has already indicated that he will introduce a small-claims court bill if this desirable reform is not effected through the rule-making powers of the judges.

Fortune On The G. O. P.

An interesting and provocative article in the current issue of Fortune Magazine writes a bold "finis" across the decimated ranks of the Republican Party. There is nothing novel in consigning the G. O. P. to the limbo occupied by the Federalists and the Whigs. But the thoughtful analysis on which this article is based removes it from the general run of casual political prognostications.

Representative Fish's theory that the Republican Party should, in the language of Fortune, "divest itself of its top hat and reappear in its shirt sleeves on the other side of the picket lines" is effectively deflated. This picture appeared ridiculous enough when first advanced by an Old Guardsman from New York. When Fortune concludes sniping at it nothing is left but tatters.

One of the arguments turned against Mr. Fish is a denial that "Mr. Roosevelt's victory was a victory for liberalism." "Instead," the article continues, "he offered as the principal and most persuasive reason for his re-election an argument which appealed primarily to the defenders of property . . . an argument which, indeed, was made by Coolidge and Hoover—the argument of prosperity."

This view of Mr. Roosevelt's campaign is oversimplified. But it contains a large grain of truth. Millions of voters who contributed to the electoral landslide last November were undoubtedly thinking of the money put directly into their pockets from the Federal Treasury, or of the improved economic conditions for which they gave the New Deal credit. Prosperity is still the winning issue, but the Republicans no longer carry that tag.

The very strength of this argument, however, tends to weaken the conclusion that the Republican Party should fold up and write its memoirs. In this period of chance and change it is scarcely realistic to tell the G. O. P. that it is through because Franklin D. Roosevelt has placed a chicken in every pot.

Turning to a second alternative, Fortune advises the G. O. P. against the role of "loyal opposition" on the ground that it would be a waste of time. "A useful opposition," it is contended, "can function only in a country in which the vital decisions are made by the legislature." But national policies in this country are now formulated by "the people's President."

The weakness of the G. O. P. in both House and Senate cannot be denied. But this is scarcely the time to suggest that all organized opposition be dissolved. As Fortune points out: "Wherever in Europe the present tendency toward executive determination of basic policy has developed, the opposition has sickened and one-party governments have resulted." If the American concept of self-government is to be preserved, any trend toward a one-party system must be fought rather than encouraged.

Fortune attempts to minimize the danger resulting from a collapse of opposition here by saying that "if the Republicans liquidate, the Democratic Party will split." Some tendency in that direction has already been manifested. But in an "era of good feeling" major schisms do not develop overnight. Offsetting the centrifugal tendency in any top-heavy majority is a strong incentive to stay on the Roosevelt bandwagon so long as it is running smoothly.

There is widespread sympathy with the idea of party realignments so that American politics might "quicken with a conservativism that would really conserve, a liberalism that would really liberalize." But it is yet to be proved that disappearance of the Republican Party would further that objective. The entire situation may be changed by issues arising within the next few years. Even without a place to hang their hats, therefore, 16,000,000 Republicans are likely to cling to their traditions until something obviously more attractive is offered them.

After all, those who say the world is going to the dogs may be right about it. If it were, those nearest the dogs would be the first to know.

It is only in the natural order of things that the rich should shrink from being soaked by the Government.

"Most people can't stand prosperity," declares a sociologist. Most people don't have to.

Communist 'Gangsters.'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All my family, union brothers and friends join me in a vehement protest against your editorial "The Russian Debacle" and the cartoon on page 8, of January 26.

What right have your employes, the bourgeois gentlemen, to meddle into the affairs of a mighty worker's democracy of Soviet Union?

The editorial and the cartoon prove that Wall Street is grievously offended because the Soviet Union does not glorify but shoots all exploiters, terrorists, gangsters, betrayers, warmongers and conspirators, who dare to oppose the will of the majority.

It is not Stalin nor the Soviet Administration who are demanding a severe punishment for all plotters. It is the people. It is the populace who are willing to go to any lengths and depths to preserve and defend the government that gave them freedom, security and emancipation.

This trial proves once more the true equality in that country. No matter how famous nor how high position one may hold, if he deviates from the dictates of the majority, into the dust he crashes. Like the Trotzky-Zinovieff group, so will the Radek-Piatakoff group face the music before the just tribunal of the organized workers.

For the latter, like the former group, is guilty of terrorism beyond a shadow of a doubt.

Step by step, corroborated by facts, dates, documents, letters, by deeds of murder and sabotage, the terrible degradation, the counter-revolutionary rottenness and brutality of these men, with Leon Trotzky their direct inciter and leader, reveals itself before the whole world.

No Stadium In Ellipse.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of January 25 a writer suggests that the Ellipse be made the site of the new stadium. He suggests this would be preferable to a parking space. With this we most heartily agree.

But such a use would reduce the White House to the status of a bird house. I have a better idea. Eradicate the holes and properly seed the area. Then turn it over to the purpose it has nobly served for some decades—that of a sports area.

This assault upon park areas for every conceivable purpose is ceasing to be a joke. J. WINSTEAD.

Mr. Noyes On A New Public Library.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your first-page article of January 22, reporting the introduction by Representative Collins of a bill authorizing $2,500,000 for a new building for the Central Library, contains references to me which have been misinterpreted to my embarrassment.

The article states that the introduction of the bill, which authorizes an appropriation of $2,500,000 in the face of an estimated $10,000,000 deficit for the District of Columbia, "is in accord, however, with the suggestions of Theodore W. Noyes, president of the board of library trustees, in his annual report." From these words, coupled with the fact that only my name is used in the article as making suggestions favorable to the bill, some of your readers have inferred that Mr. Collins introduced the bill at my request and that the bill itself may have been drawn under my direction or with my suggestions as president of the board of trustees of the Public Library.

That is not the case. I was much surprised on learning of the bill's introduction at this time. I had not been consulted concerning it, and did not know, the wording of the bill or the nature of its specific proposals.

The quotations which you use from my annual report do not give unqualified indorsement of the proposal at this time to appropriate or to authorize appropriation of $2,500,000 for a new Central Library building. That plan, if in accordance with my report, is to be considered an alternative to the "skillful enlargement" of the present Central Library. The new building, even at the heavy cost suggested, may turn out to be the choice between alternatives, but that choice has not yet been made. The proposed cost of the new building, $2,500,000, was surprising to me. The suggestion of my annual report was that relief of the library conditions should be obtained either by skillful enlargement of the present building or by the erection of a new building, "at a minimum of cost."

The personal references in the bill to myself and the proposal that a hall in the new building bear my name are naturally gratifying, but as the context of your news story suggests that the bill's introduction was in accord with my suggestion you will, of course, understand the embarrassment of such references.

If I had been consulted as to the wording and time of introduction of the bill, I would have advised:

1. That the amount of drain upon the depleted and inadequate District revenues proposed as necessary to remedy the existing unbearable conditions at the present Central Library should be at a "minimum of cost." Unless my impression based upon preliminary rough estimates turns out to be erroneous the $2,500,000 would be not the minimum, but the maximum, of cost.

2. That the introduction of the bill at this time would be premature and impolitic. That no complete helplessness and hopelessness to solve our library problem except by the expenditure of millions on a new central library building on a purchased site had yet been proven or admitted. To propose an expenditure of $2,500,000 on a new building at this time in today's conditions of District finances and the present threat of disaster to District taxpayers would be, in my opinion, impolitic.

3. I would have insisted, of course, that the complimentary proposal that a hall in the proposed new building bear my name be omitted. I would have suggested that if any name were to be coupled with the new building, it should be that of Andrew Carnegie, if his gift of the Carnegie building in Mount Vernon Square was to be abandoned, so far as its most important uses were concerned, upon which occupancy of the site and the gift itself were conditioned.

One feature of the bill meets with my unqualified approval. This feature is the fact that the bill is introduced, not labeled "by request," by Representative Collins.

I value highly, as all Washingtonians do, his helpful personal interest in the solution of our library problem. He has thorough understanding of today's vital needs of the library system and is in hearty sympathy with the library's desperate plight. The implied assurance that his ability and great influence will be exercised effectively in the final solution of our library problem deserves and receives the grateful appreciation of all book-loving, library-using Washingtonians and of the whole National Capital community whose welfare he protects and promotes.

The Sermon In The Rain.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The greatest discourse which ever fell from mortal lips is known as "The Sermon on the Mount," and takes its designation from the mound upon whose top it was delivered. This sermon contains the sum and substance of the message which Jesus came into the world to deliver to mankind.

It can be said without sacrilegious implications that Roosevelt's inaugural address was in many ways analogous to this immortal discourse, and might well be called "The Sermon in the Rain." There President Roosevelt stood bareheaded, the rain torrents beating in his face, proclaiming to the people the economic and social gospel which he believes to be his mission and message for the salvation of a chaotic Nation.

Roosevelt's address was but an integral part of his social philosophy. His speech of acceptance at Philadelphia, his Chautauqua address on world peace, his two discourses at Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires, and his second inaugural address were all played on one clear harp in divers tones. They expressed his mission to the Nation and to the world. The first of the beatitudes proclaims, "Blessed be the poor, for theirs is the kingdom." Roosevelt's chief concern is for the forgotten man. The Prince of Peace declared, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God." Roosevelt re-echoes the same sentiment in terms suited to the day and times.

There is captious complaint that Roosevelt dealt in generalities and did not lay down a specific program for the correction of acknowledged evils of the Nation which he had been chosen to head, but, likewise, "The Sermon on the Mount" dealt with fundamental principles rather than specific proposals by which they might be remedied.

The tree is more important than the fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit. Roosevelt, like the great Master, spoke as one having authority, and not as the scribes, and the people marveled at his sayings.

Both "The Sermon on the Mount" and "The Sermon in the Rain" had the common end in view—to improve the moral climate of the world. KELLY MILLER.
Washington, Jan. 26.

Judge Hitt's Court.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have often observed the manner in which Judge Isaac R. Hitt holds court. Here is a judge that conducts the duties of his office not only in a just but in a manner of human understanding and sympathy. I have seen a poor but proud woman before him while the other side had all the legal advice necessary. How he questioned her and encouraged her to bring out her side, without hurting her pride. Every one could not help but feel that behind this dark robe of justice beats a warm human heart. One can say that Judge Hitt does not play any favoritism but is eager to see that justice is done regardless of belief or color.

If the President and his advisers could see, I am sure that they would not want to deprive the District of a judge with all these qualities.

"Grandstand Play."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer derived a great deal of pleasure in reading Mr. Waltman's article in The Post of January 21.

Yes, how silly it was both for the people to stand out in the rain for hours to see the inauguration of a man who was not new to them, and for the Chief Executive of a great Nation like this to unnecessarily expose himself to the dangers of yesterday's awful weather, and also setting such an example to many who are already too careless in the protection of their health. To the writer the entire display seemed to be a grandstand play for the benefit of a certain class of people who look upon the President as being inspired.

The Post Impressionist

While We Wait.

ON Friday, January 22, the lilac bushes had begun to bud and we feared the fruit trees would express hopes that might later be nipped by frost. Carrots and onions were flourishing in the garden and the lettuce was showing 2 or 3 pert inches of pale greenness. We decided that if the ground dried out enough we would very soon be able to plant potatoes, for spring was on its way. Eph summed it up:

"Waitin' is not what we is bestest at, but it is what we does mostest of."

That's exactly what Eph said, but it is not exactly the way he said it. There is soft music in Eph's voice and he left the "t's" out of "bestest" and "mostest." But if I wrote "mos'es" you might feel tempted to pronounce it "Moses" to rhyme with "roses," and what you would rhyme "bes'es" to I can only guess. (As you already suspect, "posts" is "pos'es" and "nests" is "nes'es.")

Which goes to show that while our written language is an amazing thing it has its limitations. It doesn't reproduce speech; it merely gives you a hint of something with which you are already familiar. Every written line is a phrase in music (Sidney Lanier was, I think, the first to point this out) and the punctuation marks do the best they can to indicate the timing and expression. But the paradox is that it is music that gives you everything but the tune. Consider the phrase, "It ain't the 'eavy 'auling that 'urts the 'orse's, 'oof, but the 'ammer, 'ammer, 'ammer on the 'ard 'ighway." That immediately suggests the London cockney—if you happen to know the tune. If you don't know the tune it means nothing to you. If you do know it you can make the phrase sound like a cockney without dropping the aitches. (And what is there in that last sentence to make you put the accent on "do" except your own intuition?)

Capt. Ebenezer Longbow and I were talking about this matter just the other day. You see I happened to know that the captain has some quaint ideas on the subject and that they are very easily tapped.

* * * *

Nowadays (said Capt. Longbow) our eyes convey sound impressions to our brains, the symbols touching little springs of memory that give them meaning; but some of these days, it is conceivable, at least, these symbols will change, and when we read them we shall note not only every little inflection and intonation the author has in mind but the very timbre of his thought.

What happens when you talk into a phonographic record? Your voice makes an impression on a plastic surface. Those impressions are the natural written language unhampered by spelling.

Some of these days we'll photograph these impressions, make matrices of them, and run them off in daily editions. And we'll read them as easily as we listen to the radio.

Why not, you ask, multiply the records and listen to them? Why, simply that that would make a mockery of any public reading room and destroy the peacefulness of the home. Think of sitting in a reading room with "Silence!" signs all around you and a couple of hundred phonographs advertising themselves in the immediate neighborhood! Or think of listening to your daughter reading the society column while you were trying to concentrate on the sports page! No, sir. We'll have our phonograph records visualized and read them.

And when I spoke of the timbre of a thought it wasn't a slip. Hollywood wizards have already proved that sight and sound are interchangeable, that sounds may be seen and scenes heard. Why not include thoughts? What do we have concealed in those half-baked puddings we carry in our skulls to do our thinking with? Words? No. Impressions. Millions of them. Some of them in secret drawers forgotten for years, but which may be opened the day after tomorrow by a key carried on a vagrant breeze. Memory, the librarian, gets a whiff of mignonette, consults her card index, and says, "Sure! Compartment Umpty-Steen. Girl selling flowers at the Liverpool docks." And that opens a lot of other compartments.

Why, bless you, here you have a hint of the universal language, transcending all spoken words, the recording of emotions, love, hate, fear, longing, with all their variations, not only faithfully recorded in the brains of men but in the brains of animals.

Why, some of these days (continued the captain, growing enthusiastic), you won't have to bother with fingerprints to discover the murderer. You'll simply have an expert examine the victim's brain. And there, plain as print, will be a full description of the murderer, together with the victim's private opinion of his character.

"And what," demanded Demosthenes McGinnis, coldly, "has this to do with next year's crop of potatoes?"

* * * *

We hadn't been talking about potatoes on that occasion. It was just Mr. McGinnis' sarcastic way of throwing cold water on the captain's enthusiasms.

But it occurs to me that Eph and I had been talking of potatoes just before wayward fancy summoned me to Robin Hood's Barn, and that we had agreed that waiting for spring was weary waiting.

Oh, well, that's all right, too. It has helped to put in time while we're waiting.

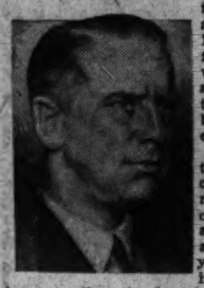
Tax Exemptions.

THE CITY OF NEW YORK employs about 170,000 persons on a payroll of about $200,000,000 a year, not one of whom pays a dollar of income tax to the United States Government. They include 35,000 school teachers, at an average salary of about $3,000 a year; 18,500 policemen and 6,500 firemen, practically all of whom receive sufficient salary to require a return to the income tax department but for their constitutional exemption.



The teachers get virtually the same vacation that the children enjoy, and they may retire at the age of 70, or after 35 years, on pensions amounting to one-half their average pay for the last five years. They are less favored in the matter of retirement, however, than the firemen, who are eligible for half pay after 20 years. Policemen must serve 25 years to be eligible for pensions, but there are other provisions which permit retirement of all classes on less pay earlier in life. A lieutenant of the fire department stepped down recently at the age of 42, and in the prime of life, on a pension of $2,100 a year, which is exempt from both Federal and State income taxes.

People employed in business must make a return on a minimum income of $1,000 a year to both the Federal and State income tax department if they are single and not the heads of families. Heads of families are allowed an exemption of $2,500. A man or woman making $25 a week, single and not the head of a family, would be required to pay about $3 to each income tax authority, but John O'Brien, late surrogate at $25,000 a year and later Mayor of New York for one year at $40,000, receives a pension of $12,000—good as long as he lives or Mrs. O'Brien after him—entirely free of income tax.

• • • • •

MR. O'BRIEN MAY BE faintly remembered as the Tammany stop-gap who preceded Fiorello La Guardia. His term as Mayor at $40,000—which salary has since been reduced to $22,500—served to enhance his pension, as it increased his average for his last five years. He could have retired on $14,000 for the duration of his own life, but the option which he exercised to protect Mrs. O'Brien brought the yield down to $12,000 tax free.

It should be mentioned that after the pensioner has received back the amount which he paid into the retirement fund at the rate of 3 per cent of his salary the pension comes under the State income tax law. However, that takes a long time and the collection of such taxes would require such minute searching that few old pensioners ever bother to pay. In fact, many city, county and State employes never bother to pay the State income tax even though they are legally subject to this one, the same as other people.

Federal judges at $10,000 a year do not have to pay the State tax, although they must pay the Federal, and all other Federal employes enjoy the same exemption. Employes of private business, professional people and those who have the responsibility of conducting their own business houses and providing the money for the pay rolls every week are required to pay heavy State income taxes in the brackets of the Federal judges, in addition to their Federal taxes.

There are a large number of so-called constitutional offices in each State which are exempt from both income taxes. These include the sheriff, the county clerk, the prosecutor, the Governor, secretary of State, Lieutenant Governor, comptroller, attorney general and scores of judges, all of whom, in New York City and State, receive high salaries, many of them as much as $25,000 a year.

A few years ago, when economy was rife and salaries were reduced 10 per cent, the judges of the New York Appellate Division, constitutional officers receiving $25,000 a year, tax free, refused to accept the reduction and threatened to appeal to their own court, although clerks, scrubwomen and elevator hands attached to their court had to stand for the cut.

• • • • •

THE NEW YORK BOARD OF ALDERMEN, which will become extinct at the end of this year, consists of 65 members at $4,650 a year, reduced from $5,000. They are supposed to pay the State income tax but not the Federal, and they now threaten to bring suit for retroactive restoration of their pay cuts which would more than compensate them for their State income taxes, if any. It is not to be lightly assumed, however, that they have all paid the State income tax merely because they are eligible.

It is a tradition among State, county and city employes that the State tax does not really apply to them, but only to suckers engaged in the uncertain, competitive scuffle for existence, with no prospect of pensions, without civil service protection and subject to the Federal income tax as well.

The school teachers of New York City, although much favored by comparison with employes of private industry, are not the high-salaried members of the department of education. In less than one page of the official roster there are listed 51 officials drawing more than $9,000 a year, including 11 at $10,000 a year or more and one at $20,000 a year, exempt from Federal income tax.

This is just a hazy sketch of the local New York City situation. Literally millions of employes of the State, cities and the counties all over the country enjoy the Federal exemption from Federal income tax on billions of dollars of pay roll and all Federal employes are exempt from State income taxes, if any, in the State where they are employed.

William Thomas

By William Lyon Phelps.

Browning's Butler.

An interesting Associated Press despatch in the newspapers a few weeks ago contained some personal reminiscences of the great poet Robert Browning, contributed by William Thomas, now 82 years old. He was interviewed at Los Angeles, where he has lived for 19 years.

For five years he was Browning's butler in the house in London. Everything that he says about the poet's habits of work and his simplicity and economy of living, is accurately in accord with what Browning's son told me more than 30 years ago.

• • • • •

He says that Browning was regular in his habits of work. Every morning, no matter when he had gone to bed the night before, breakfast was served at 8 o'clock. Then the poet went into his study and worked all the morning and no one was allowed to disturb him. Browning's son told me that not only all his poems and professional work were done in the morning, but every letter was written and that after luncheon he hated to put pen to paper. He worked as regularly as if he were keeping office hours; and at lunchtime work was over until the next day.

William Thomas said Browning had only two suits of clothes, a gray one and his regular evening dress. This is probably close to the actual fact, although, as Browning was so prominent in society, it would seem that he must have had some kind of formal dress for afternoon tea-parties, weddings, receptions, etc. During the day he certainly wore gray tweeds whenever possible; all his later photographs show that.

But he was out at dinner parties nearly every evening in London. Tennyson, who hated society, said to him one day, "Browning, you'll die in a dress suit." But he didn't. He died, like a Christian, in his nightgown.

• • • • •

Although Browning was a poet of genius, he was accurate in all household expenditures. He hated an unpaid bill, and had a horror of even small debts. I have read his account-books of all the daily expenses at Casa Guidi, where he lived in Florence with his wife; every daily purchase was carefully written down.

Possibly the interviewer misunderstood one remark by the butler. William Thomas is reported as saying that he remembers Elizabeth Barrett, "later Browning's wife. That she was a fine lady, delicate, pleasant and beautiful." Inasmuch as she became Browning's wife eight years before William Thomas was born, he must have confused anecdote with reminiscence. All testimony, however, from persons who knew men or women of genius, should be preserved; and I, for one, am grateful for William Thomas's reminiscences, so far as they refer directly to the poet.

Manila Letter

By Vicente Albano Pacis.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Manila.

PRESIDENT QUEZON has revealed a plan of the commonwealth government to purchase or accept gold bullion in payment of taxes, the metal to be used to strengthen the currency reserves. His announcement coinciding with the publication of an article by a secretary of finance in Theodore Roosevelt's cabinet on the subject, was generally regarded as indicating the eventual establishment of a Philippine currency independent of the American monetary system.

The Quezon announcement simply discussed the reinforcement of the currency reserve, most of which is now in America, but the article frankly advocated purchase by the government of most of the Philippine gold production of some $22,000,000 a year, the unhitching of the Philippine peso from the American dollar, and the revaluation of the peso to one-third of the United States dollar. The Quezon announcement was innocent enough, but related to the article it indicated a fiscal program of transcendental import.

Locally it is believed that an independent gold standard currency for the Philippines will have many advantages. The article in question, for instance, cited the adverse effects of American dollar devaluation on both the Philippine currency reserves and the peso itself.

It is also pointed out that the Philippines' gold production is steadily increasing, the estimate for 1937 being about $30,000,000. It would be a foresighted step, the article stated, to keep most of this gold at home, since the possession of gold is one of the highest ambitions of every nation.

As one would expect, the article is climaxed with the argument that a country on the way to complete independence must of necessity begin building an independent currency.

President Quezon has suggested direct purchase or receipt of gold in lieu of taxes. It should also be remembered that under the Philippine constitution the commonwealth retains perpetual interest in all Philippine natural resources, including mines, and may itself raise the necessary gold by the use of this right.

Under the same constitution and the independence law, however, the President of the United States must pass upon all currency legislation which the commonwealth may enact. It is therefore certain that if there is a serious plan to unhitch the peso from the dollar, the Philippine-American economic conference to be called in Washington soon may also be asked to consider the proposal.

Tax Strikes Mark Second Anniversary.

THE SECOND YEAR of the Philippine commonwealth, when new or increased taxation measures enacted in order to meet the growing expenses of a burgeoning government came into effect, is being ushered in by a series of tax strikes.

The strike wave started in the city of Manila and spread to some of the provinces. Three kinds of specific levies are the object of the protests. First of these is the increase in slaughterhouse fees of from three to five centavos per kilo of meat slaughtered. Second is the doubling of the license tax applied to food vendors occupying stalls in the public markets, the new rate being $2 a year. The third protested levy is the merchant's tax of 1½ per cent levied on food sales but only against merchants grossing over $100 a quarter.

First to resort to strike was the Cattlemen's Association of Manila. At its last session the National Assembly enacted a law authorizing municipal councils to levy a maximum of five centavos per kilo of meat slaughtered in the municipal abattoirs. In all Philippine cities and towns, the slaughtering business is a municipal monopoly for reasons of health and sanitation. Shortly after the law's enactment, practically every municipality passed an ordinance increasing the old maximum levy of three centavos to five, effective January 1, 1937. The tax from this source is a substantial portion of the total incomes of the local governments, hence their 1937 budgets, drawn up and approved before the effectiveness of the ordinance, were invariably based on estimates which included the increased abattoir fees.

The cattlemen's allegation that the ordinance was railroaded cannot hold water. The bill in the assembly was well-publicized in the newspapers, and municipal ordinances may not be effective until after they are published at least three times in the official gazette. As all government publications, however, the gazettes go straight to the archives without being read.

Other dealers in food products, getting their cue from the meatmen, next struck against both the license and the percentage taxes. Their plea was short—too exorbitant. As these are purely commonwealth taxes, the protest is directed against the central government. Commonwealth officials, however, are convinced that ignorance and mob psychology are largely behind the strikes which, in many instances and in many towns, resulted for days in entirely empty public markets. The strikers, or most of them, are not aware that the percentage tax is levied only against a minimum gross of $100 per quarter, a sum that automatically exempts at least three-fourths of them. But strikes having become the vogue, the few who are really affected had an easy time stampeding their more ignorant colleagues.

THE TOKYO house of Mitsui plans soon to establish in Manila a 2,000,000-yen brewery. Announcement has also been made of the entry in the Philippines of the equally powerful Kyodo Fishery Co. and the South Sea Marine Co. Not quite so ostentatious but for this reason more dangerous is the entry of various Japanese interests among them a 20,000,000-yen group, in the Philippine gold industry.

A certain naivete characterizes the brewery project. The announcement frankly states that the Japanese beer tax is exorbitant and that one of the principal aims of Mitsui would be to evade this tax. It went on to say that only 61 per cent of the capital would be controlled by Mitsui and the balance would be offered for subscription in the Philippines. It was non-committal as to labor, but Japanese establishments in Manila like shirt factories and dry-goods stores employ practically no one else but Japanese.

Following the formal but sudden announcement of the Mitsui project, the Manila press did a great deal of feinting but apparently without landing an effective punch, since no change in the plan has been learned to date. Points of attack were the intention to keep the majority of the stock in Japanese hands and the unannounced but nevertheless true implication that a Japanese brewery in Manila would also jump the local tariff duties. Quite a different consideration is the fact that the San Miguel Brewery in Manila is not only the most renowned in the Orient but is quite capable of supplying Philippine needs. Spanish-owned and employing experts from both Spain and Germany, San Miguel beer is even exported to America.

Under the Philippine constitutions foreigners cannot own mining properties nor control corporations engaged in exploiting natural resources. In both fishing and mining, therefore, the Japanese must remain in the minority. But in the fishing industry, the Japanese are the real bosses. Through actual survey, they know the fishing resources of the Philippines from A to Z, and they furnish the fishing experts; therefore, any firm organized under the law is bound to be controlled in fact by them. The advent of Japanese miners and mining engineers may eventually do the same in the gold and other mining industries for Japan and the Japanese.

United in their strength they bring

The lighted torch they would pass on—
But, rather, make our pledge to these

Delayed Dawn

By Barnet Nover

The Moscow Trials.

THERE ARE long twilights in Russia.

The social revolution was an unconscionably long time in coming in that land. A century elapsed between the uprising of Stenka Razin (1670-1671) and that of Emilian Pugachev (1773-1775). And it was another century and a half before Lenin and the November revolution of 1917.

The twilight of the Romanoffs was extremely prolonged. And equally troubled, if not yet of the same duration, has been the transition between revolutionary turmoil and that humdrum stability which is the goal of every political system. In its twentieth year, the Soviet regime is, as the recurrent Moscow trials bear witness, still tortured by inner dissensions.

The fact that so many alleged conspirators have in the course of the last years been enmeshed in the dragnet of the political police is unquestionably a tribute to the watchfulness of the Stalin dictatorship as is also the circumstance that these self-confessed efforts to seize power have proved so hopelessly futile.

Kiroff, to be sure, is dead. But Stalin and Voroshiloff and Molotoff and the others who, we are asked to believe, were marked as the victims of "Trotzkyist assassins" are still alive. But these same facts point straight to the conclusion that the Soviet system rests not on voluntary consent and willing co-operation, but on bayonets. It is not a comfortable perch.

• • •

THE MEN who guided the destinies of the American colonies in the war for independence from Great Britain became the leaders of the new nation. Fierce and bitter were the struggles among some of them. But, with the passage of time, they forgot, as did Thomas Jefferson and John Adams in the sunset of their days, the things that had divided them and remembered only their common heritage in history.

So was it with the men who were at the helm when Japan was transformed from an isolated feudal state into a modern nation. Those who had been rebels under the Shogunate became the elder statesmen under the empire. The last survivor among them, Prince Saonji, is, though an octogenarian, still called upon to give of his advice and counsel in national emergencies.

But that was not true in the French Revolution and it has not been true of the Russian upheaval. Of the important leaders who helped usher in the world-shaking events of November, 1917, and who guided the Soviet state in its first critical years only one is left who is still in the seats of the mighty. That is Stalin.

• • •

OF THE OTHERS the more fortunate were those who died in harness. Lenin lies enshrined in a mausoleum to which all Communist pilgrims turn their steps. He is the Mohammed of a new Islam whose mecca is Moscow.

Sverdloff died early enough to have a city named after him. Dead, too, are Djerzhinsky, head of the Cheka; Lunacharsky, first commissar of education, and Chicherin, the aristocrat who helped win a place for proletarian Russia in the council of nations. Dead, but at their own hands, are Joffe and Tomsky. Kameneff and Zinovieff, after confessing their sins with suspicious fullness and eagerness that convinced few outside of Russia, were shot as traitors a few months ago. Now it may be the turn of men who had managed to remain in authority, the Radeks and Sokolnikoffs. And Trotzky, greatest of Lenin's collaborators, is in exile.

The applause that once greeted the founder of the red army has been silenced. He is now reviled as a traitor by the regime he was instrumental in founding and defending and even the history books have rewritten in Russia to disparage his role and destroy his reputation.

Stalin remains. He alone wears the mantle of Lenin and far more than Lenin, far more than any other individual in the long and troubled history of Russia, does he command the instruments of power.

• • • •

REVOLUTIONS devour their children. In the French Revolution doom sounded for Danton soon after the Girondins, including Mme. Roland, had mounted the scaffold to the guillotine. And before very long it was the turn of Robespierre and St. Just. After five frenzied years only those who had fled or had made themselves inconspicuous or, like Barere, had been clever enough always to be a step ahead of the game, remained in power.

In Russia's case the "liquidation" of the revolutionists, if not of the revolution, has been much longer. But the process has not been dissimilar to what took place in France at the end of the eighteenth century.

It would be stretching historical analogies to the breaking point to draw too fine a parallel between the French and Russian revolutions. But in one essential particular all great social revolutions are alike.

• • • •

Sooner or later the energy of revolution must be deflected into the more humdrum channels of peaceful construction. Sooner or later the element of fatigue enters in. The rank and file tire of turmoil and want peace and quiet. That was the secret of Thermidor and that, in part, is the real secret of Stalin's success. Trotzky's doctrine of permanent revolution is much too heroic for human nature, much too messianic. Stalin, by promising a Utopia more likely of attainment than that which depends on world revolution, struck a responsive chord.

• • • •

ONE NEED not accept as gospel truth those all-too-perfect confessions at the various Moscow trials to believe that some of the "Old Bolsheviks" never happily settled down to the new order of things; that they retained at least a sentimental attachment for the older and more flaming creed.

After Mohammed, Islam broke up into three sects. Stalin is obviously determined that communism is not to suffer the same faith. In his keeping are the bones of the prophet and the new Koran. He has, by a process not unknown in the history of other lands and other faiths, arrogated to himself the sole right of interpretation.

But Trotzky lives and is out of reach. As long as that is true the possibility remains that he may convince the followers of Lenin, at least those living in partibus infidelium that it is he, not Stalin, who is in the direct succession.

Thus it is that the Moscow trials, while ostensibly and in a measure a vehicle for the extirpation of heresy at home, are also a device to prevent the growth of heresy abroad by discrediting the pretender. So the blood-letting continues even though, with a great fanfare of trumpets the world has been told that the night is over and that the democratic day has dawned in the Soviet Union. Apparently dawn, too, is a long time in coming in Russia.

Change In The Pacific

Chinese Philosopher Sees New Balance Of Powers In Far East, Suggesting Regional Peace Machinery Ultimately.

By Hu Shih.

Following is an article, slightly excerpted, which appeared originally in a recent issue of Foreign Affairs:

BROADLY SPEAKING, there are only two views of the Far Eastern situation. There is the view of those who regard it as completely beyond any peaceful remedy. They are the defeatists. But there are still a few optimists who hold the view that recent changes in the balance of power in the Pacific may yet provide far-sighted and constructive statesmanship with an opportunity of devising some kind of peaceful adjustment.

Many believe that there is no longer any balance of power in the Far East, that there is only the supremacy of one nation—Japan. They believe that the semblance of international equilibrium and order which obtained during the period of the Washington treaties (1921-31) was ruthlessly and irrevocably destroyed by the acts of Japan beginning in September, 1931. They believe that where one power is in a position of such absolute preponderance, and where that power happens to be intoxicated with the successes it has met with in carrying through an apparently irresistible program of militaristic expansion, there cannot be any remedy or modification of the situation without an international war.

From such a major premise only defeatist conclusions can be drawn; either the powers of Europe and America must acknowledge their helplessness in this situation, and each of them plan to withdraw the commercial and financial interests of its nationals from the Far East in order to avoid a possible conflict; or they must appease the predominant power by sacrificing all principles of international justice and the sanctity of treaty obligations in order to retain a minimum share in the spoils; or each must go on with its military and naval preparations in anticipation of an inevitable clash in the not-too-distant future.

Pacific Pessimism Based On Ignorance.

I VENTURE to suggest that this defeatism in all its form is based upon an erroneous understanding of the present situation in the Pacific area. It is erroneous today to think of that situation as one of Japanese supremacy unmitigated by any changes in the balance of forces. Such changes have been taking place since 1931.

It is unnecessary to recount how at the outbreak of the World War in 1914 the semblance of a balance of power which had prevailed since the close of the Russo-Japanese war in 1905 completely broke down. Great Britain, Russia and France was left in the hands of Britain's ally, Japan, who proceeded to wipe out all German possessions and influence on the Chinese coast and in the Pacific Ocean. For seven years, from 1914 to 1921, Japan ruled the Western Pacific almost without a rival. This supremacy was evidenced by Japan's "Twenty-one Demands" on China in 1915. It was still more clearly evidenced at the peace conference in 1919 when the victorious Allies, against the nation-wide protests of the Chinese people and again a world-wide sentiment for the Wilsonian principle of self-determination, conceded to Japan the right of free disposition of former German concessions in Shantung.

The Washington Conference was called to readjust the problems of naval disarmament and the Pacific problems left unsolved by the Paris peace conference. It had a direct bearing on the Pacific situation in four ways. First, the question of Shantung was amicably settled between China and Japan. Secondly, the eight signatory powers (other than China) of the Nine-Power Treaty pledged themselves "to respect the sovereignty, the independence, and the territorial and administrative integrity of China; to provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government; • • • (and) to refrain from taking advantage of conditions in China in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of subjects or citizens of friendly states, and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such states." Thirdly, the Anglo-Japanese Alliance was not renewed and its place was taken by the Four-Power Treaty. Fourthly, the ratio 5-5-3 was adopted for the naval strengths of Great Britain, the United States and Japan, respectively.

There is such a thing as power becoming greatest when it is made innocuous. The best example is the supremacy of the United States in the Western Hemisphere. Japan's position in the family of nations was the highest when she abided by the results of the Washington Conference and remained one of the Big Four in the League of Nations. Since she began to abuse that power in 1931, and particularly since she withdrew from the League in 1933, she has not again attained her former heights of power and prestige.

Status Of Japanese Shifted In Sept., '31.

THUS WE MAY SAY that "the supremacy of Japan in the Far East" was not only true of the period of the World War and the years immediately following its conclusion, but also true of the ten years after the Washington Conference. While the League covenant and the Washington treaties and the pact of Paris prevailed there was no balance of power in the Pacific. There was only a new world order, or at least the semblance of it, within which Japan was tacitly acknowledged by all as the undisputed leader in the Far East and the Western Pacific.

But since September 18, 1931, that is to say, since Japan's militarists started their aggressive campaigns in Manchuria, in Shanghai, and in North China—what a tremendous change has taken place. By those acts of aggression, Japan threw into the discard the whole postwar machinery of peace, Japanese power ran wild. It upset not merely the East, but the entire world. It destroyed that semblance of international order which alone had legalized and tactily protected Japan's supremacy.

What are the new factors brought forth since 1931 as a result, at least in part, of Japan's violent action?

In the first place, Soviet Russia has come back to the Pacific as a first-rate military power. At the time of the Washington Conference, she had not yet been recognized by the other powers. She was neither a participant in the conference nor a signatory to the Washington treaties. But since 1931 the Soviet Union has brought to the Far East a huge armed force estimated to include between 300,000 and 500,000 finely trained and well equipped men. She is developing one of the greatest air forces in the world. Since 1931, her submarine and destroyer fleet in the Pacific is reported to have quintupled and the coast guard fleet to have increased elevenfold. In these years she has constructed about 7,000 miles of new railways along the Mongolian and Siberian borders, and 3,000 miles have been double-tracked. And behind all these there has taken place the most remarkable progress in industrialization, not only in European Russia but also in the Soviet Far East.

In other words, Russia has now definitely returned to the Pacific area as a fully armed power. She comes, too, possessed of new and vast industrial resources. Japan must now reckon with her more than ever as a factor in the Pacific scene.

Rearmament Of Powers Around Pacific Important.

THE SECOND new factor is the rapid rearmament of all the non-Asiatic nations bordering the Pacific or having possessions there. A continuous ring extends from the Aleutian Islands to Singapore and the Dutch East Indies. We read the other day that for the month of July, 1936, the Dutch Indies were the heaviest buyers of American ammunition. The construction of the British naval base at Singapore, after being suspended for a time, was vigorously resumed after the fighting at Shanghai early in 1932. This most gigantic naval base in the world is now practically completed. New Zealand and Australia, the two paradises of the Southern Pacific Ocean which had never dreamed of the necessity of arming, are now seriously working out their own schemes of coastal defense. Each is recruiting an enlarged militia, manufacturing its own planes, and laboriously extracting gasoline from coal and shale. Recently when I was in Winnipeg I read in the Free Press that Canada, too, is going to have a new navy. And the United States is constructing new armaments and fortifications from the Philippines to Alaska, and undertaking a heavy naval building program.

This new factor in the Pacific scene may indeed turn out to be the most important of the three which I have enumerated. For, as John Hay knew, an independent and strong China is necessary not only for the maintenance of the Open Door but also for the stability and peace of the Far East.

Such are the new factors which now are entering into the balance of forces in the Pacific and changing that balance so that Japan, though she still plays a mighty role, is no longer supreme.

Evidently if these new factors are not properly organized they may lead toward a terrible international conflagration. It might begin with a war forced on China by Japan's continued aggression, and gradually it might involve Soviet Russia, Great Britain and ultimately the United States.

But wise statesmen may also discern in this changing balance of power new possibilities for a peaceful adjustment of the Pacific world. They may now discover a way to create a regional peace machinery which has as it participants the United States, the Soviet Union and the British Empire (with all its Pacific members), as well, of course, as Japan and China. What is certain is that the alternative to such a peaceful collective arrangement will be another world conflagration the magnitude and the horror of which will be beyond anything we now envisage in the boldest stretch of our imagination.

Wheeler Warns FinanceGroups To Clean House

Senate Inquiry Chairman Forecasts Demand for Public Ownership.

Chairman Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, of the Senate Railroad Investigating Committee, warned Wall Street yesterday to "clean house" or face "an irresistible demand for public ownership" of railways and utilities.

His statement followed upon a spirited criticism of certain types of holding companies by J. M. B. Hoxsey, New York Exchange technical expert, who termed them "necessarily bad."

As Hoxsey ended his testimony, Wheeler leaned across the green-topped conference table toward Richard Whitney, former stock exchange president and the committee's chief witness, and said:

"Unless the financial group in New York stop some of the things they have been putting across, there will be an irresistible demand for public ownership. They ought to clean house and quit milking the public."

Hoxsey had told the committee the holding company "may be a channel for evil practices," although he did not believe it was an evil in itself.

He identified a memorandum he wrote back in 1926 for the exchange's listing committee in which he asserted some utility holding companies "represent a temptation to rob the subsidiaries for the benefit of the holding company, to the detriment of the stockholders of the operating companies and often patrons."

Cabinet Problem Told to Hirohito

Tokyo, Jan. 27 (AP).—General Kazushige Ugaki today laid before Emperor Hirohito an account of the obstacles—chiefly grim army opposition—encountered in his efforts to form a new cabinet.

Then he returned to his task with evident encouragement.

At the same time Ugaki, former governor general of Korea, nominated by the sovereign three days ago to form a ministry to succeed that of Koki Hirota, received the first physical evidence of the bitter opposition of military and reactionary elements to his premiership.

As he returned from the imperial palace three unarmed civilians, members of fanatical rightist societies, charged into the house he was using for headquarters and tried to present a petition demanding that he abandon his efforts to head a ministry.

Ex-Kaiser Spends Lonely Birthday

Doorn, The Netherlands, Jan. 27 (AP).—Wilhelm, of Hohenzollern, 78 years old, spent his loneliest and simplest birthday anniversary today since he abdicated his German throne and fled into the Netherlands November 10, 1918.

He had one visitor, the Rev. Ludwig Schneller, of Cologne.

Although the royal woodchopper's physician asserted his patient was practically recovered from a recent influenza attack, members of the household said he was weak and listless.

Hitler Held Favorable To Smaller Reichstag

Berlin, Jan. 27 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler may abolish soon the 741-man Reichstag and create a smaller Parliament, Nazi sources predicted today.

They declared the Nazi chief may announce this move when the Reichstag meets Saturday at his call. Official confirmation could not be obtained.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

After 10 Years' Marriage, Wife Discovers Husband in Trifling Infidelity; Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is the first time I have ever written to a column for advice, but my problem is not one to be discussed with friends, and I have no family. After more than 10 years of marriage I find that my husband went completely overboard, as he saying goes, for a young girl last summer. I knew about the affair at the time, but thought it was a matter of only a few evenings out. Now I find it was more serious, though it is now over and my husband insists he still loves me and that he must have been crazy to behave as he did.

• • • •

He is a man of education and refinement and, I always thought, of high ideals and personal pride. He assures me that he has not seen her since and that he dislikes her intensely. Though he has never made much money we have been devoted, and I feel completely heartbroken and disillusioned and I do not know whether my feeling is or can ever be the same again.

• • • •

The problem is whether to try to go on making a home and forget about what has passed (although there are complications which make it almost impossible), or to get out on my own, which I know will be a lonely business. I know, too, that a divorced woman is always a target for undesirable comment. It would cause scandal among our friends, and I dread this and would feel horribly ashamed and humiliated, though honestly the thing that happened was no fault of mine.

• • • •

I do not care particularly for a divorce, as the thought of re-marriage does not appeal to me, but I wonder whether any sort of happiness could ever come out of our trying to stay together. My husband says he cannot bear the thought of my going and that he still cares more for me than anyone. I feel that this wil always be between us; have worried and become ill over it, and do not know whether you can help, but perhaps just writing and getting it out of my system will be a relief.

• • • •

I do not seem to know my own feelings any more, whether I still care for my husband or whether the feeling of loyalty is strong enough to keep me, or whether my pride causes me to stay. Do you think people can ever be happy again with such a thing between them? And do you think a man can ever be fully trusted again after once having done such a thing?

• • • •

I am old-fashioned about marriage and dread the thought of breaking up my home, though it is not a happy place just now. Can you say anything that might help? If you can answer soon it will be appreciated as I am thinking of leaving the city within a short time.

M. L. T.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR M. L. T.: It is obvious you are still in love with your husband and greatly dependent upon him. I think your love of him is the one thing that is holding you, and that your pride is serving no other purpose than to make you stubbornly resistant to his pleas for forgiveness, understanding and restoration to grace. If your marriage goes on the rocks as a result of what has happened, I wonder if you will believe that it is more because of your hysterical reaction to it than because of your husband's short-lived attack of midsummer madness.

• • • •

Your husband has told the simple truth, I believe, in swearing that his transient affair with the girl was essentially trivial and meaningless, in the sense that it failed to affect in the slightest degree his devotion to you. Any person possessing some slight understanding of masculine psychology can grasp this fact without necessarily endorsing those offenses against the spirit of matrimony which, since time immemorial, have been committed in the name of the so-called "double standard."

• • • •

Since you love your husband and since life with him offers greater social and economic security than you might achieve for yourself by your own efforts, I am sure the common sense thing to do is to dry your tears, pick up the pieces of your broken heart and forgive and forget. Unquestionably it was a painful and shocking thing to learn of your husband's faithlessness, but if you can be altogether honest with yourself, I believe you will admit that you have been reveling in mental torture to some extent in an unrealized effort to punish your husband for what he did.

• • • •

Try to get outside the situation, as it were, so that you can look at it more objectively. I suggest you read Marjorie Barstow Greenbie's "In Quest of Contentment," a wise, witty, sympathetic, understanding and intellectually rather worldly volume, giving special attention to her group of lively essays under the heading, "Contentment in Love." You may conclude, after reading it, that you can afford to condone and literally forget—by dismissing as of no importance—your husband's defection of last summer.

• • • •

In order to recover a more balanced state of mind it might be well to get away from your husband for a couple of weeks or a month. Don't leave him in a huff, however; or with any undercurrent of suggestion that you may not return. Tell him simply that you wish to get away for a while in order to get your bearings, and that you hope to come back to him shortly with the recent unhappy memory completely washed away. Then try to live up to that promise. Try to go on with your marriage as you would have done if you had never known of his infidelity. If you act in such a way as not to break the mainspring of your husband's devotion, what has happened may be the means of intensifying his loyalty a hundredfold. But this cannot be accomplished by hysteria and reproach.

M. H.

Shoes Are Colorfully Feminine, Spring Style Previews Show

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.—With shorter skirts the fashion for spring and summer, interest will be focused on the feet, according to previews here. Shoes are not only more intricate in styling, but all feet to be in step with the mode must walk in color. With clothes for all occasions becoming more feminine as the season advances, shoes follow the same theme. Even for sports wear, the heavier type of shoe of the peasant influence has been relegated to the background in favor of lightweight styles.

The newest shoes combine color with style and comfort. This should be good news for numbers of women who dread buying new shoes because of the discomfort caused the feet until they have been worn several times. Heels are both low and high—by low, however, is meant a medium heel rather than the flat type.

There is an upward trend in many of the spring models—either in the build of the shoe or the tongue effects, which gives an appearance of height to footwear which is really high. Piping and lattice cut-out effects abound for both street and afternoon shoes. Even the classic oxford tie has become complicated and is adorned with cut-outs and contrasting materials in appliqué-like styling. Rolled tongue flaps, a period influence gone modern, appear on numbers of daytime shoes of the step-in type.

Different types of leathers combine to fashion chic footwear; likewise, leather and fabric. One of the outstanding mergers of the season is suede and gabardine in monotone and two-color combinations. Shoes of the walking type are usually made of bucko; they are an ideal accent for tweeds and woolens. Calfskin is another popular spring shoe medium, particularly for dress-up oxfords and for step-ins or pumps. For the last mentioned, stitching often is used for decoration.

One of the loveliest of the spring shoe colors is called carnelian—a blend of wine, purple, brown and red. It is a grand accent for beige, black, blue or gray costumes and appears in shoes for all occasions and in all materials. Handbags, gloves and even stockings of the same tone have been designed to insure color harmony in accessories.

Shoes of every color are appearing to add brilliance to the spring costume—some are bright in quality, others are of subdued tones. Multicolored shoes are effective with a costume in solid color or a print repeating the shoe colors, and are practical for wear with almost the entire wardrobe.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"MY LITTLE GIRL and her terrier keep our house cleared for action," said Mrs. Garry yesterday when we went to call on her. We had admired her living room so much that she let us see the rest of the house, too.

It had a pleasant simplicity about it, which was what she meant by being cleared for action. There wasn't much that a busy little girl and her dog could hurt. The furniture was nearly all maple, strong and sturdy in build and not easy to spill or scratch. And the coverings were homespun or washable cretonnes in small colonial prints. And most of the rugs were hooked designs in wool that could take an awful lot of punishment.

The living room was long and narrow, with windows at the two ends, because it went all the way through the house. The wall paper was white, with a small, but jaunty little red flower in it. And the sofa was covered with indigo blue in a rough-textured material. An easy chair with maple frame had turkey red chintz pads with a calico print motif, and another chair was covered in a red plaid. Two other small chairs had yellow calico patterned chair pads on them. White dotted swiss curtains at the windows and woodwork painted bright blue gave the nicest May morning crispness to the room. Bookcases were painted blue, to match the woodwork, and the ceiling was painted blue, too. This gave the room quite a refreshing detail.

The lamps were pewter, milk glass or pressed glass, with white pleated shades, and for the walls Mrs. Garry had framed bird prints along with some paintings on glass that looked very charming in this room.

There was no use to try to have plants growing in reach of that little girl or her dog, so Mrs. Garry got some glass shelves made to go across the upper part of a sunny window. Here she could grow what she pleased with some peace of mind!

This room is a concession to youth. Some people don't believe in such, but advocate making the children learn to respect fine furnishings. That's all right, if you have a big house, but it cramps the children's style too much if they must use the best room as the place to play in.

Mdivanis' Sister Colorful Dresser

Kin of Marrying Princes Knows Her Clothes.

By the United Press.

Paris.—Mme. Jose Maria Sert, the former Roussadana Mdivani who was a sister of Princes Alexis, Serge and David, the marrying Mdivanis, is considered one of the best-dressed women in Paris. She is of medium stature with blonde hair, a large, well-shaped head, enormous blue eyes and a short, extremely thin figure.

Mme. Sert, wife of the noted painter, spends a good deal on clothes and is always seen at the smartest places in Paris, on the Riviera and, until recently, at their beautiful home in Spain. For sports wear she has chosen a simply tailored two-piece suit of gray flannel which she wears with a finely knit turtle-neck sweater of black wool. A tasseled cord of gray defines the waistline, and she wears a three-quarter length mink coat for extra warmth.

For cocktails, she wears another tailored suit—this one in shining black lacquered satin. The mid-calf length skirt is smooth fitting in back but is gathered itno full folds in front. The tailored jacket likewise has the fulness concentrated in front. It is worn over a sheer white batiste blouse that falls in a full jabot from the high neckline.

Quickly Crocheted Set Makes Complement for Chair, Dresser

By Alice Brooks.

WHO'D ever guess a set like this was so easy to do! It is—and what's more, it's the perfect complement for chair, dresser or buffet! Flower baskets—one wide, one narrow set off by lace stitch—furnish the design for this quickly crocheted trio. Done in string, they're durable as one could wish. Now that leisure time's more plentiful, you'll want to make several sets of these. You can, for they're inexpensive. In pattern 5651 you will find directions and charts for making the set shown; material requirements; illustrations of all stitches used.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 250 West Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Toys for Tub Make Bathing Attractive

Other Advice Is Offered for Use by Mothers.

Inducing the little boy or girl of the family to bathe is often more wearing than the most strenuous household task. Just why Johnny balks at the bath is a mystery to his mother. It isn't so long since he cooed with joy when she put him in the tub.

According to child training experts, there are logical reasons for his changed attitude. To the baby, the bath meant companionship and fun. But now, it means being shipped off to the bathroom alone, often in the midst of constructing a bridge, pasting up stamps, or doing something equally absorbing. The bath is seldom welcome to the growing child—unless you make it so.

Mother's problem therefore comes down to ways and means of making the child's bathing more attractive and exciting. From a duty it must be turned into fun.

Such things as a big cake of soap, fresh absorbent towels, and even a dash of fragrant bath salts help to achieve this, for children and grown-ups alike. Tub toys provide novelty, while for some children even the crudest kind of shower is a treat. Often it helps to look in occasionally and ask the child how he is getting along. One mother we know starts to tell her boy a story, to be continued when he is scrubbed and tucked into bed.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Keep Fit and Avoid Mental Breaks.

People differ widely in their mental attributes. Some possess a very high order of intelligence, but even among this superior group many will be found who are utterly lacking in common sense and who are decidedly subnormal in the matter of emotional control. We say that they are brilliant but erratic, undependable; that their emotions are out of harmony with their intellectual attainments. Many of these individuals find the greatest difficulty in adjusting themselves to the practical side of life. Still others will give up or surrender quickly. In other words, they lack the staying quality which we call perseverence.

We must recall that the brain can become diseased well nigh as readily as any other part of the body. Blood vessels may be injured to such an extent that too little nourishment is available and, in consequence, the mind will fail to behave in a normal fashion. We may liken the situation to that of a musician attempting to render a Beethoven sonata on an instrument that is out of tune.

But lack of blood is not the only means of damaging the brain. It may be harmed by disease, by poisonous substances—the products of bacteria or of improper digestion—or by physical means. Even before the birth of the child the developing nerve tissue of the embryo may be affected if the mother is ill. The persistent, excessive use of alcohol is another factor. Then, in childhood, such infections as meningitis and encephalitis may be responsible for loss of certain functions essential to normal thinking.

We are all familiar with the delirium that may accompany pneumonia, or in fact any disease in which the patient is deeply toxic or is running a high temperature. Here we observe the effect of bacterial poison upon the processes of thought. Fortunately, for the most part, the body rids itself of these noxious products as recovery advances, and with convalescense normal perspective is reestablished. Disease of the heart and the kidneys, a combination which no one should seek, may retain sufficient depressing chemicals within the body to bring about brain deterioration.

Need we wonder then that thoughts, ambitions, and impulses are largely dependent upon the physical balance of the body; on the smooth operation of digestion and the circulation, including the endocrine glands.

We must keep in mind the close relationship of all our organs; the fine adjustments of the working parts. Some day we will know more about how to prevent injury to delicate nerve elements In the meantime we can learn the simple rules of health—the need for rest and sleep and of occasional relaxation—lest we generate poisons that may disorient ideas or unseat lucid, logical thinking.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

NEW YORK, Jan. 27.

THIS is the old and forlorn season when our sports pages bloom with pictures of athletic young ladies engaged in such violent forms of activity, usually just for fun, that I get exhausted just looking at them, and have to fall into the old family rocker for an hour's cat-nap.

ALICE HUGHES.

Did you ever see girls play the game known as squash - rackets, or did you ever play it? I've been seeing so many photographs of maids in shorts, holding small tennis bats just before the Big Match that I thought I'd better investigate this strange pastime, so I shambled over to the local Junior League clubhouse to peer at this strange (to me) sport, and I haven't been the same woman since. That frantic afternoon aged me a good 10 years, and now there are far more silver threads than black.

For I find that this squash-rackets business is four times as fast as tennis, and ten times as furious. These amiable-looking and occasionally pretty girls, who might be sitting quietly at a bridge table or in some warm and cozy saloon, attack that little ball with such ferocity that the spectators grow limp and slightly faint, though the players are such tough stuff that they hardly seem to puff. I was privileged to watch a four-game match between our local champeen, Miss Margaret Bostwick, and Mrs. E. Trevor Hill, which was won by the former in handy style, and after I was carried out I swore off squash tennis. Never again. I felt as though I had gone ten slashing rounds with my poor spouse.

Then, of course, there is the epidemic of photos of girls at their figure-skating. And if you can tell me how they manage to look so lovely and graceful while four feet are in the air, I'll get you a pass to the Central Park Zoo!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—While the handsome Earl of Warwick is being sued for divorce, his very pretty countess, Rosé, has been noted much in the company of an Olympic bobsledder. And there's a sport for you. Though not for me. One of the finest looking young couples I've ever seen, those two young Warwicks, but they just haven't been able to make it go . . . Don't you get a little ill at the recent attempts to scandalize slightly about the Duke of Kent? Now that the Duke of Windsor is playing his bagpipes and practicing on his accordion over in that Austrian castle, why can't they let the royal family of England alone? . . .

The night-club competition gets more hectic here all the time. One of them, the Club Bali, over on East Fifty-fourth street, even publishes a four-page magazine every week, filled with pictures of famous people snapped munching or sipping there. Its host is the noted Jim Moriarity, who ran a superb, high-class and successful speakeasy in the old days, but has not done so well with his joints since repeal, which is an odd commentary on the vagaries of fortune. It's a sermon test in reverse, for "the wages of sin" were very fine. . . . With snow around and about, one of the big local general stores runs a two-day "ski special" to Lake George at $13.75 a head, all expenses paid—except, I suppose, the doctor's bill.

If it isn't one color, it's another—and now there's a drive to popularize "cornelian," which the press agent describes as "a solid ray of sun-mellowed beauty," and if you can make anything out of that you're a smarter girl than I. At any rate, cornelian shoes, handbags, stockings and gloves are being given a heavy push. If you see "a solid ray of sun-mellowed beauty" going down your street, that, friends, will be carnelion. You've been duly warned.

How to Train Your Pets

CAN YOU TRAIN rough-and-tumble Rover to obey your commands? Yes, you can! All he needs is a few lessons and an extra bite for being a good fellow.

Start with this simple trick: Take the leash in your left hand. Gently press on his haunches with your open right hand and say "sit down." Once he's down, hold him there, repeating the words until you are ready to release him with an approving "all right."

When he'll sit down and keep still without the aid of your hand, reward him with a tasty morsel. Repeat this training several times a day, about 10 minutes at a time.

Jolliest of tricks is "sit up." Put Mr. Dog in a corner—but not on a slippery floor. When he sits down, gently force him up on his haunches by putting your left hand under his forelegs. Chuck him under the chin with your right hand. When he keeps his balance unaided, reward him. Short lessons, frequently given, are best for this command.

Don't rush Rover to his diploma. Thorough mastery of each trick makes the next one that much easier. "Sit up" leads to "stand up" and "walk to me."

Simple methods—but used by a trainer of famous movie dogs. In our 40-page booklet, Facts About Pets, he tells step by step how to teach your dog canine maners and tricks. Helpful pointers, also, on the care of cat and canary, and the keeping of tropical fish.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Facts About Pets," to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

10-Button Gloves Passe.

The long ten-button gloves, once the only hand covering for evening wear, are losing out. Orry-Kelly, movie designer, isn't giving them to heroines any more to wear on the screen and in their personal wardrobes. Bette Davis, Joan Blondell and others are replacing them with short, flaring gloves.

Brocades and Lames Are Highly Popular

Paris (U.P.)—Brocades and lames never have been more popular and have never been richer in luster and in fabric. Black is still shown at many houses, but is invariably brightened by brilliant gold beading which makes a bright splash of contrast on the shoulder, on the bodice or at the waist.

Mrs. Coffee and Mrs. Duncan Are Leaders for Year.

The Seventy-third and the Seventy-fourth clubs met yesterday for luncheon and elected officers for the coming year. Members are wives of Representatives of the Seventy-third or Seventy-fourth Congress.

Mrs. Albert E. Carter, of California, wife of Representative Carter, was guest of honor at the luncheon held at the Dodge Hotel yesterday by the Seventy-fourth Club. It was just two years ago, in the same room in which they met yesterday, that Mrs. Carter organized the club.

Mrs. Roper Entertains In Flower-Decked Home

Sunnyside, the Rock Creek Park home of the Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, was the scene of an "at home" party yesterday afternoon, Mrs. Roper's first of the season.

Almost as filled with flowers as is the hostess' summer garden, the house was warm with Southern hospitality. Mrs. Roper, famous for her love of flowers and her beautiful garden, always sees to it that her home is well decorated with blossoms.

The hostess received in the drawing room, wearing a gown of becoming shade of dubonnet, made on gracefully draped lines. Receiving with her were the wives of the Assistant Secretaries of Commerce, Mrs. Ernest Draper, in black velvet, with a corsage of gardenias on one shoulder; Mrs. J. Monroe Johnson, whose dark blue velvet frock was designed with a square neck, caught at either side by two rhinestone slips.

Secretary Roper Attends.

Secretary Roper arrived home and "attended the party"—briefly joining each group for a few words.

Mrs. Frank Bohn, the former Miss Grace Roper, who assisted her mother, wore a gown of black ripple satin fashioned with a wide white panel down the front.

The buffet table was centered with a low bowl of pale pink roses, white lilac and ferns. Tall ivory tapers gleamed in silver candlesticks and at either end were tea and coffee, with platters of sandwiches and cakes. Artistically carrying out the pastel color motif, there were two large cakes, one iced in pale green and the other a luscious pink.

Among those present was Countess Potocka, wife of the Ambassador of Poland, who will be leaving soon for New York City. Yesterday Countess Potocka completed her black ensemble with a felt hat designed with a close fitting cap crown, and a small tower-top effect in the front. At either side of this were wings from which flared a dainty veil. Mme. Wankowicz wife of the Polish Counselor, also chose black for her costume. Her frock was of simple design with a high neck and narrow slit pockets.

Among the others seen were Frau Scholz, in brown, her coat of light cocoa krimmer; Mme. Alfaro, wife of the Ambassador of Ecuador, in black, with a scarf of silver fox, accompanied by Mme. Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala; Mme. Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czechoslovakia, in black, with a peaked crowned hat and coat of squirrel; Mrs. Paul Myron Linebarger, in pearl gray trimmed with chinchilla; Mrs. Frank Shortall in black; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, her black cloth coat collared with silver fox and a high crowned hat of black velvet banded with a wide ribbon of grosgrain, and Mrs. Huston Thompson and her daughter, Mrs. John Simmons.

Mrs. Swanson Present.

Two of the Cabinet ladies present were Mrs. Swanson wearing a chinchilla coat over her black frock and a small brimless hat, and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., in gray.

Mme. van Haersma DeWith, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands, had on a black suit, the long, flaring coat of which was edged with silver fox; Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State, wore a cape of alternate bands of black broadcloth and Persian lamb; Mrs. Millard F. Tydings' brown felt hat, designed with upturned brim, was trimmed with mink, just matching her coat, which she wore over a gown of bronze lame; Mrs. Hermann Koppleman was costumed in eel gray.

Also present were Mrs. Malin Craig, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. H. O. Chalkley, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy; Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation, and her house guest, Miss Daphne Duquette; Mrs. Peyton March, Mme. Sze, wife of the Ambassador of China; Mme. Wijkman, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Swedish Legation; Mrs. Thomas Burke and Miss Sibilla Skidelsky.

Freers on Cruise.

Federal Trade Commissioner Robert E Freer and Mrs. Freer sailed from New York yesterday on the Georgic for a cruise to the West Indies. They will return to Washington February .

Wedding Invitations.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Mrs. William H. Neblett, of California (Mr. Neblett is the law partner of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo), who is here for a visit, is one person who dares to wear and gets away with the most unusual hats. She has one felt affair that fits the head snugly and has a long whisp of bright green chiffon trailing down from the back. Yesterday, while having luncheon at the Shoreham with Mrs. McAdoo, she wore a stunning green suit with blouse and matching odd little hat of some very colorful knit, with red predominating. The solon's petite wife was in black—smart because of its utter simplicity and sensible lack of doo-dads.

• • • •

When Mrs. Walter Duncan had luncheon with Mrs. Louis Caldwell yesterday at Pierre's it was the first time she had been in an "American restaurant" and merrily she chuckled as she remarked about this. Two of the wittiest people who have ever visited the Capital, Mrs. Duncan and her lovely daughter, Marjorie, who are here with the Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun before returning to their home in London, are being wined and dined. However, the pace will not kill—they are quite used to it. Just before they came over Mrs. Duncan chaperoned her charming daughter to 85 balls!! Why, our busiest debutante season doesn't have that many evening parties.

Other guests at Mrs. Caldwell's luncheon (she, incidentally, was very smart in black, her elbow-length cape covered with a fine tracing of silk braid and around her throat a luxurious scarf of sables) were Mrs. George Allen, Miss Helen Kaene, Mrs. George Holmes, Mrs. Harry Butcher, Miss Anne Wheaton and Mrs. George Romney.

• • • •

Eleanor Flood and Ethel Worthington were very intent upon something as they hustled around a downtown corner yesterday. Eleanor was wearing a swagger length leopard coat and her gray-eyed companion was in a good-looking cloth costume.

• • • •

Four years ago when the President had his first inauguration, Mme. Pastoriza listened to the whole ceremony by radio down in Santo Domingo. Then, when the Pastorizas came to Washington for duty, one of the thoughts that thrilled her the most was that she would be here for this inauguration, but—strange as it seems—she knew less about it than when she had been a spectator via the air waves. With several other diplomatic ladies she was waiting inside the Capitol for the moment to arrive. The gentleman who was to conduct the ladies to their places arrived and announced it was raining hard, very hard, and furthermore the place reserved for those listening to the President was not one speck covered, but that if anyone wished to brave the elements, he would be only too glad to take them. Disappointed, but sensible, several remained indoors—not only not seeing the some-day-to-be-historic scene, but also not hearing it, there being neither radio nor loud speaker near them.

• • • •

Now it can be told—about the parade last Wednesday. As you will remember, Mrs. Roosevelt accompanied her husband back to the White House from the Capitol in an open car. When almost home she noticed that her tiny be-flowered hat was dripping blue on her gloves, and immediately she had the harrowing thought—when she did get indoors and took off the now well-soaked hat, would her hair be blue and, if so, would there be time to do something about it before receiving all of the guests? But all's well that ends well—there was nothing blue about the President's wife except her costume, and not a single cold in the household, not even among the children.

Among the members of the diplomatic set who were guests at the tea which Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, gave yesterday afternoon were Mme. Alfaro, wife of the Ambassador of Ecuador, and Mme. Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, snapped just as they started up the steps.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hostess to Forty

Gambling Joint Is Raided Here; 3 Men Seized

Walking calmly into a fashionable apartment in the 1400 block Fairmont street northwest, police raided an elaborate gambling joint allegedly operated by Zachariah (Zebbie) Goldsmith, 49, reputed one-time bootlegger and well-known gambler.

Led by Capt. George M. Little, chief of the vice squad, the raiders gained entrance to the flat, situated on the second floor, when a colored janitor went to the door to "report a water leak."

Two men were taking notes over a telephone, Capt. Little said, when he entered. His men took into custody Goldsmith and two others. At police headquarters, all were charged with setting up a gaming table and released on $1,500 pending a hearing today.

The other men seized gave their names as Milton Block, 42, of the Cavalier Hotel, and Gus Askin, 28, 2500 block Seventeenth street northwest.

Capt. Little said a warrant had been obtained against the alleged race bet headquarters on evidence secured through plays and "undercover" investigations.

The apartment was furnished with expensive divans and modernistic furniture, police said. Capt. Little's report showed an involved system of telephone connections—34 in all, connecting five telephones—was confiscated with several run-down sheets and slips allegedly containing horse race bets telephoned in from outside "runners."

Goldsmith has been charged with violating liquor and gambling laws on five previous occasions.

Bride of Duke of Norfolk

HONORABLE LAVINIA STRUTT, 21-year-old daughter of Lord Belper, who was married to England's premier duke and earl, the Duke of Norfolk, at London yesterday.

Women Battle As Duke Weds Lavinia Strutt

By the Associated Press.

London, Jan. 27.—The Duke of Norfolk, called "England's most-eligible bachelor," married the Hon. Lavinia Strutt today, while hundreds of women outside the chapel fought police in a wild melee.

The wedding of the 28-year-old premier duke and Earl of England and the 21-year-old daughter of Lord Belper, with some 3,000 guests present in Brompton Oratory, was itself the most brilliant social event of the new year in London.

Several hundred women of the thousands who stood in the street broke through police rope lines, screaming, tumbling or being jammed up against railings.

Some sat down in the middle of the roadway and would not budge. Police picked them up and carried them off. Mounted officers rode their their horses toward the crowd to press it back.

British royalty, ambassadors and ministers attended the wedding, which was solemnized without a nuptial mass because the bride is a member of the Church of England. It was expected, friends said, she later would be received into the Catholic Church, of which her husband is a leading layman.

Priest Pacifies Thug Battling 50 Policemen

Besieged Jailbreaker Holds Out Against Bullets, Gas and Water.

St. Augustin, Quebec, Jan. 27.—A fugitive from a Quebec jail fought a gun battle with 50 pursuers who surrounded his farmhouse refuge today and surrendered only when his ammunition ran out and in response to the plea of a priest.

Frost-bitten and numbed by sub-zero weather, Honorat Bernard, 28-year-old jailbreaker, gave up after policemen had used rifles, pistols and tear gas bombs against his stronghold while firemen played water from hoses through the windows.

Bernard escaped Monday from another gunfight in a Quebec cellar in which his companion in the jail break, Arthur Fontaine, was shot to death along with Detective Leopold Chateauneuf.

From that encounter he fled 12 miles to the farmhouse of Arthur Noreau. Police, who followed his trail, said they were informed Benard forced Noreau and his family to quit the house at gun-opint today.

Fifty men surrounded the building. Leaders called for the fugitive to come out.

Bullets from the police rattled against the house and an answering rain of shots came from Bernard.

Then the officers hurled tear gas into the windows while firemen poured water inside.

Bernard held to his refuge. Hundreds of farmers and villagers flocked to the scene and a parish priest, the Rev. Alphonse Doucet, was summoned.

Father Doucet called to the besieged man and got a response. Then the priest talked to Bernard.

Bernard agreed to give himself up. When officers entered they found his ammunition was exhausted.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

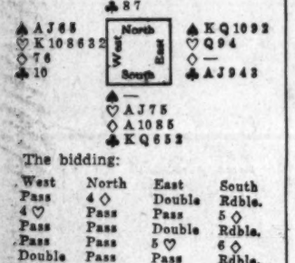
By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

An Unusual Bidding Situation.

The redouble is a very delicate weapon and must be used with extreme caution in competitive bidding. Rarely is it possible to redouble without risking the opponents' "run-out" to a sacrifice contract. The opportunity afforded South, in today's hand, was as splendid as it was unusual.

West, dealer.

North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	4 ◇	Double	Rdble.
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	5 ◇
Pass	Pass	Double	Rdble.
Pass	Pass	5 ♡	6 ◇
Double	Pass	Pass	Rdble.
Pass	Pass	Pass

South recognized North's diamond bid as merely a shutout effort (North-South were not using the two-way three-bid), but, nevertheless, with his own magnificent fit, immediately saw that at least five-odd was practically assured. Naturally, South feared a spade contract by the opponents but, since he was prepared to go as high as six, he correctly redoubled at the four level, and awaited developments. To his relief, the opponents mentioned hearts instead of spades. Actually it was tempting to double four hearts since, if West's bid had been based on a fairly short suit, a double might result in slaughter. But South feared two things: first, that the opponents would escape into spades; and second, that West had a very long heart suit, in which case South's heart holding would prove insignificant. Therefore, he chose the safer course of bidding five diamonds. East should not have doubled this, but he jumped to the conclusion that South was "saving." South's redouble proved to the contrary, and now East, not being able to risk a bid of spades for the first time at the five level, ran out to five hearts. South, after this, no longer had to fear that there was a heart loser in the combined North-South hands, and, with the virtual assurance that the club Ace lay under instead of over his own King-Queen, went to a slam. He felt that this was a better course than doubling five hearts which might be set several tricks, but which again might get off for a small penalty. (As a matter of fact, five hearts would have been defeated only one trick). South was practically certain, from the very strong bidding of the opponents, that a double of the slam would follow, and a redouble should, he felt, prove highly profitable.

West, holding an Ace and a King, can hardly be blamed for doubling the adverse slam after the bidding that his partner had done.

The slam could have been defeated by the opening lead of the club Ace and club continuation, since West would have ruffed. But East's actual lead of the spade King can hardly be criticised. Certainly there was no way for him to tell that South was void of spades, or that his partner could ruff a second lead of clubs.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, lumbago, loss of pep, and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. (Adv.)

Committee Rider

Observers are speculating about the purpose of a proviso of the deficiency emergency relief bill which has pased the House. This proviso, part of the limitations on spending the funds, follows:

"That no part of this appropriation or of the appropriation in the emergency relief appropriation act of 1936 shall be used hereafter to pay the compensation of any person not taken from relief rolls detailed or loaned for service in connection with any investigation or inquiry undertaken by any committee of either House of Congress under special resolution thereof."

Now most of the Senate committees holding investigations, including the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee and the Senate Civil Liberties Committee, have borrowed heavily on the regular agencies for staff assistance. In a great many cases the salaries of these workers temporarily loaned to the committee is coming out of emergency relief funds.

The proposed new auditorium may be modelel after the one in Kansas City, Mo. At any rate, plans and details of the Kansas City auditorium have bene wired for.

Message Center

King Midas, who could turn everything he touched into gold, but couldn't have even a slice of the stalest bread, had nothing on Capt. Carter W. Clarke, commanding officer of the War Department Message Center. With one of the world's most elaborate radio communications systems at his command, Clarke has been unable to get word of his mother, who lives in a small town just below Paducah, Ky., in the heart of the flood area.

Day and night, thousands of flood messages pour over Clarke's desk—it is through the Message Center that the War Department keeps in touch with the corps area headquarters in the flooded regions, receiving the latest reports of the river risings and assistance needed and co-ordinating flood relief activities. The Red Cross, WPA, Weather Bureau and other agencies battling the flood are also filing thousands of words daily over the Army's high-speed radio equipment. So heavy has the traffic been that yesterday eight additional radio operators from Fort Monmouth were put on.

The main work of the message center is to handle the traffic going through to the corps area headquarters. Off in a corner of the center is the Army's amateur radio station, over which hundreds of messages from towns directly in the flood's path are coming. A large drug house offers to send drug supplies wherever needed through amateur broadcaster; in another message Mrs. Brown wants to know how her children in Louisville are getting along. The messages over the regular army network are formal, but those over the amateur waves are as chatty as telephone conversations.

Copies of every message cleared through the Center passes over Capt. Clarke's desk and Clarke probably has more "news" of the flood at his finger tips than any other man in Washington—but still no news whatsoever of his mother and of the house near Paducah, Ky., where he was born.

The advantages of a Nation-wide radio network are being convincingly demonstrated by the Message Center these days. Why not establish a Federal communications central here in Washington for the use of all the agencies. That would seem a constructive idea for some of the reorganizers to ponder.

WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JANUARY 28, 1937

Well, I'll Tell You . . . . . By Bob Burns

If you want to be appreciated in this world you've got to use a certain amount of showmanship. No matter how well you do a thing, you don't get no credit for it unless you make them think it's hard to do. A tap dancer on the stage can get in just as many fancy taps with his toes by takin' it easy but he knows well enough that he won't get no applause unless he makes it look like he's breakin' both legs. You've got to make the public think they're gettin' a run for their money. It's just like the time one of my uncles went to the city and his tooth got to botherin' him so he went to a dentist to get it pulled. This city dentist happened to be a big dental specialist and my uncle hadn't been in the chair two minutes when the tooth was out without any pain at all. My uncle asked the dentist how much he charged and the dentist said "My usual price is ten dollars, but I see you're a working-man and I'm only going to charge you two." My uncle glared at him and he said, "Why, the last time I had a tooth pulled was down home and my dentist worked over me a half an hour and yanked me all over the place and he only charged me a dollar."

Experts Urge Yacht Basin For Channel

Southwest Interests Are Opposed to Cutting Parking Space.

A glorified Washigton Channel, with ancient piers and wharves removed and replaced by a modern yacht basin and latest conveniences for commercial craft, was pictured yesterday by Army engineers.

At a public hearing called to hear suggestions on the improvement program, the tentative plans drafted by the District Engineer's office were praised by yachtsmen, steamboat line officials and civic leaders.

As presented by Lieut. W. J. Matteson, Army District Engineer, and E. A. Schmitt, senior civilian engineer, the improvement, which has been authorized by Congress, contemplats the following changes:

Construction of a yacht basin with a capacity of 300 boats, with provision for enlargement to accommodate another 100 if the need arises.

Would Move Morgue.

Removal from their present waterfront sites of the District Morgue, an old building used by the antiaircraft unit of the District National Guard and the out-of-date Naval Reserve pier.

Extension of the pier head line from 10 to 70 feet channelward, depending on the location, to enlarge the capacity of the proposed yacht basin.

Replacement of antiquated docks, buildings and other structures which now mar the appearance of the north side of Washington Channel by up-to-date utilities.

The only serious objections raised at the meeting, held in the Navy Building, were to the proposed elimination of an auto parking space to make way for the yacht basin, and to the engineer office's decision to make no provision for mooring of houseboats in the channel.

Want Parking Area.

R. D. Marshall, Jerry P. Johnson and Harry S. Wender, all representing Southwest interests, protested that trucks and passenger vehicles alike have need of the parking area off Water street, southeast of Fourteenth, which the yacht basin dooms.

Wender, who is secretary of the Southwest Citizens Association, also expressed opposition to any revision of the waterfront plan which would allow bulky commodities like coal, gravel or lumber to be unloaded at Washington Channel docks.

Schmitt and Lieut. Matteson admitted that reduction of auto parking space is an undesirable necessity and promised to study the problem further so that the loss may be kept to a minimum.

G. W. Pearson, chairman of the District wharf committee and chief clerk of the municipal engineer department, also objected to the handling of building and other heavy materials at channel piers. He said the District government probably would not object to transferring Occoquan wharf to an upstream site on the Anacostia River.

Remon Backs Program.

Appearing in his capacities as president of the President's Cup Regatta Association, chairman of the Board of Trade rivers and harbors committee and vice president of the American Powerboat Association, John A. Remon indorsed all features of the improvement program.

He pointed out that some 700 pleasure craft are now registered in Washington, with an aggregate valuation of $4,000,000. This represents a 45 per cent increase since 1932, Remon asserted.

His statement that the Army Engineers' Office acted wisely in providing only for conventional water craft and not houseboats brought a rejoinder from F. S. Bernard that it would be a wise planning move to figure on anchorages for that type of vessel. Bernard is a boat salesman.

"The little fellow," he said, "goes in for queer craft. His needs should be considered."

$200 Given Flood Fund.

Calling a special meeting, the Garfield Hospital Alumnae Association raised $200 for the relief of sufferers in the pathway of history's most disastrous flood. The money will be turned over to the Red Cross to aid in its drive for $10,000,000 for flood sufferers.

Police Grill 'Perfect Butler' Six Hours About Jewel Theft

John Morcischeck, 49, the "perfect butler" accused of trying to commit the perfect jewel robbery, was questioned at police headquarters for six hours last night in connection with his alleged theft of $300,000 worth of jewelry from Mrs. Henrietta M. Bugher, of 1785 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

Lieut. Clement C. Cox and Detective Sergts. Joe Shimon and Harry Brittan asked Morcischeck about two other robberies in which he was questioned.

The officers said the butler was arrested and held for four days after a reported $75,000 jewel robbery in the home of W. C. Durant, automobile magnate, in Deal, N. J., in 1926. Thereafter, however Morcischeck sued Durant for false arrest, and the case was settled out of court for $400.

Among others who testified at the hearing were Commander F. A. Hunnewell, Coast Guard; J. Allen Riordan, Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co.; B. B. Wills, Potomac River Line; Lester B. Powell, Powell Transport Co., and Adrian Sizer, Capital Yacht Club.

Morcischeck was questioned in connection with the theft of $40,000 worth of jewelry from Marsden J. Perry, of Newport, R. I. He was never arrested, and never charged.

A second charge of grand larceny was lodged against the butler yesterday, this one being based on jewelry allegedly stolen from Frederick Bugher, son of Mrs. Bugher.

The $300,000 in jewelry was recovered in New York before the butler's arrest Friday. In talking to detectives yesterday, he denied that he had any accomplices or that he had broken doors to reach the gems. He was returned to the Eighth Precinct Station last night and will be questioned again.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, has had a special officer on duty at police headquarters guarding the safe which contains the jewels. When this officer went out to eat, a policeman from the First Precinct relieved him.

Driver Is Held In Traffic Death Of Realty Man

Witnesses Declare Truck Knocked Auto 50 Feet Into Parkway.

Irvin H. Thomsen, 27, of 7311 Georgia avenue northwest, was held for Police Court action yesterday after an inquest in the traffic death of William A. Boss, 60, of 5404 Thirty-ninth street northwest, a real estate operator.

The coroner's jury held Thomsen under the negligent homicide act in connection with Boss' death December 24 when a truck operated by Thomsen overturned the Boss machine at Western avenue and Forty-first street northwest.

Witnesses told the jury, the truck, a 24,000 pound oil conveyor, struck Boss' car after it had almost cleared the intersection, knocking it nearly 50 feet into a parkway. Boss died instantly.

Injuries Delay Inquest.

The inquest was delayed until yesterday pending the release from the hospital of Mrs. Alice Boss, who was injured seriously in the collision which took her husband's life.

Meanwhile, Jerome C. Elliott, 71, of 733 Sixth street northwest, was still unconscious in Emergency Hospital last night from the effects of injuries sustained Tuesday afternoon when he was knocked down by a truck at Sixth and H streets northwest.

Physicians said yesterday the man's condition is critical and hold little chance for his recovery. The truck was operated, police reported, by Theodore G. Economou, 22, of 606 Fifth street northwest.

Maj. Frank D. McGee, U. S. A., 48, who is staying at 3044 Rodman street northwest, was injured seriously late yesterday when he was struck by a street car, operated by R. C. Hanna, of 611 Jefferson street.

The accident occurred at Fourteenth street and Independence avenue. Maj. McGee was given first aid at Emergency Hospital, then removed to Walter Reed. Physicians said he had suffered possible concussion of the brain and lacerations of his scalp.

Fire Apparatus Collide.

Fire trucks figured in two collisions in which there was property damage, but injury to no one yesterday.

The first mishap occurred when a hook and ladder collided with a parked automobile on Thirty-fifth street, between P and Q streets.

The second took place last night at Ninth and M streets northwest when a pumper, driven by Manford Daghett, of No. 16 engine Company collided with an automobile operated by Curtis Thatcher, 26, of 1526 A street northeast. Thatcher's car was badly damaged.

Washington motorists must continue to obey the controversial "snow removal" parking regulation, it was announced last night.

Decision by the District Commissioners on whether cars will be "tagged" pending appeal of Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran's recent adverse ruling on validity of the law, again was delayed yesterday to permit further study of the question by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal.

Robert Taylor a Poor Third As Idol of Washington Girls

Advertised Beau of President's Birthday Parties Cannot Compete With Capital Boys, Say High School Misses.

Robert Taylor, the movie idol, may be the advertised beau of the President's Capital birthday parties, but he only rates as an also-ran with six Western High School girls who gallantly posed in Commissioner Allen's office yesterday pretending to beg the city father to get them dates with Taylor when he arrives here.

Not one of the pretty damsels goes for Taylor. One likes Franchot Tone better, another Gary Cooper, another Joel McRae, Henry Fonda, Basil Rathbone or even "Tarzan" Weissmuller. And while these wonderful movie heroes outrank Taylor, not one of them is quite as appealing as certain A-1 high school swains who will be named below.

The girls are apparently operating on the well-known theory that a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush. They like their Washington beaux best, then the above-mentioned cinema stars, and Robert Taylor—poor Robert—he, heaven bless us, seems to be in third place, or as it is sometimes described vulgarly in the vernacular, behind the 8-ball. Anyhow, he is, so far as this particular sextette is concerned.

Mary Charshee, a titian-haired beauty, was most vociferous on the subject of Taylor. Has Robert Taylor got sex appeal? "No!" she exclaimed. "He's too made-up with his shaved eyebrows and plucked widow's peak. He looks like a girl in sheep's clothing." Miss Charshee said in no uncertain terms that Basin Rathbone is her movie mash—"and if they bring him here, I'll tell him so." But in preference to even the great Rathbone, Mary will take Norman Botsford, of Western.

Patricia Engleman can see no one but Franchot Tone. Her blue eyes curled upward in their sockets until they almost rolled completely over, as she permitted herself a dreamy little dream of Franchot. What a man! But chairming though the handsome Franchot may be, she puts George DeWitt, of Western, as the No. 1 man on her list. Yes, sir!

Betty Roderick would take Gary Cooper if she had a chance, "two of them, in fact," she said. She abandons Robert Tayor to the rest of femininity without so much as a shrug. But ahead of even the incomparable Cooper she places James Hedrick, of the Naval Academy. Miss Roderick doesn't do things in a small way when it comes to wishing. She said she'd take the whole Naval Academy, if opportunity presented itself, ahead of Taylor.

Elaine Bonde doesn't go in for aesthetic types. She had a few words of scorn for Mr. Taylor's features, which she described as "pretty," and then announced that her ideal is Johnny Weismuller. "I like 'em big and strong," she explained with a blush, which was most becoming. Pressed as to her main attraction locally she nominated Robert Pendleton, who though he cannot swing from tree to tree, is still better than Tarzan, says she.

Amelia Rosenbusch is a Joel McRae woman. But for real ecstacy she prefers Donald Gaw, Wilson Teachers' football player. She proved her point by producing a snapshot of Gaw, who smokes a pipe and could take a deserved place among any line-up of Hollywood stars.

Audrey Kemp thinks mighty well of Henry Fonda. The gangling newcomer to stardom has caught her fancy in a large way, as the expression on her face showed when she thought of him. A pleasant smile played over her mouth and she seemed lost in reverie, until one of the girls mentioned David Proffitt, of Western. Instantly Audrey rejected Fonda and replaced him with the fortunate Proffitt.

So that's how it is with the girls. They were willing to pose for the picture, they said, if it would help make the President's birthday parties a success.

They also admitted that a great number of women must like Robert Taylor extremely much, when Commissioner Allen chidingly pointed out to them that 30,000 people came to the Dallas Exposition to see Robert Taylor. This figure seemed to impress the girls and for a moment they wavered on their selections. Then with a unanimity which was startling they shouted "Our boys will make Robert Taylod look sick!" The local boys have made good, or should we say "made well?"

Group of 400 Honors Dr. Ely At Dinner Here

Veteran D. C. Educator Presented Watch for Long Service.

More than 400 teachers and officials of the Board of Education, the Police Department and the American Automobile Association joined in a testimonial dinner at the Shoreham Hotel last night in honor of Selden M. Ely, retiring supervising principal of the Fifth Division of the Washington public schools.

Tribute was paid the educator, for 45 years activity in the District schools, by Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Dr. Robert L. Haycook, assistant superintendent of schools, Henry Gilligan and John Vandegrift, members of the Board of Education, and others.

Dr. Ballou's topic was "An Educator." Master of ceremonies was Dr. Haycock.

Theme of the evening was a tableau, "Commencement of the S. M. E. Class," put on by the teachers, garbed in cap and gown, touching upon the high spots in Dr. Ely's career. This presentation was written by Miss Emily Scrivener, of the Park View School.

Besides Dr. and Mrs. Ely, those at the speakers' table included Dr. and Mrs. Robert Haycock, Dr. and Mrs. Ballou, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Gilligan, Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Draper, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, Inspector B. H. Lamb, Richard M. Ham, Vandegrift and Miss Marie Turner.

Dr. Ely was presented with a gold watch in recognition of his school and public service.

Collins Group Planning Trip Of Inspection

Chairman Undisturbed Over $10,000,000 Deficit in View.

Representative Ross Collins, chairman of the District sub-committe on appropriations, yesterday set a new precedent for local budget inquiries by announcing that his sub-committee will make a tour of inspection before beginning executive hearings on the 1938 District budget.

He addressed a letter to the Commissioners requesting that transportation be furnished for the committee at 9:30 next Wednesday.

The inspection tour, which may be spread over several days, will include examination of the need for new schools, streets, public welfare and health, buildings and the like.

In announcing the tour Collins reiterated a statement made at the time he was named chairman of the sub-committee that he would oppose any increase in real estate taxes as a means of meeting the anticipated $10,000,000 District deficit.

Like the Mapes committee and the Jacobs committee, he believes that real estate in Washington already bears an undue share of the local tax load in proportion to other taxable sources.

Beyond that and a blanket indorsement of the Mapes report, which recommended four new District tax bills, Collins will not go, as tax measures are handled by the House District Committee rather than his sub-committee.

The first meeting of the special sub-committee of this committee will meet today under the chairmanship of Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland.

A general plan of procedure will be drawn up, Kennedy said, but hearings probably will not be held for another week. Besides the five new tax measures proposed by the Jacobs committee, Kennedy's five-man group will have before it the proposed legislation to make effective the 3-point formula for making Federal payments.

Collins, on the eve of hearings on the District budget, does not appear disturbed at the prospect of a $10,000,000 deficit.

"It's not our job to raise the money but to spend it," he said.

Nevertheless, he has indicated his lack of sympathy with the Jacobs fiscal formula, and it is believed that his sub-committee will return to the lump sum payment indorsed by the Mapes committee.

He said yesterday that he will not insist upon including the proposed $2,500,000 public library in the 1938 supply bill, but will allow the measure to follow the customary course through the legislative committee.

Judge Refuses Writ to Hush Church Chimes

Chevy Chase Citizens Fail to Silence 7 A. M. Call to Prayer.

The Angelus chimes of the Most Blessed Sacrament Church in Chevy Chase can greet the new day at 7 a. m. without interference of the District Court—for a while, anyhow—Justice Bailey ruled yesterday in refusing a preliminary injunction to 22 irate nearby residents who hate to be awakened so early.

Justice Bailey cut the hearing short with an announcement he did not want to get into any religious controversy. He took the opportunity to interject, however, that he once lived across the street from a fraternity house which he believed to be far more trying on the auditory nerves than chimes.

"I'd take the chimes over a fraternity house any day," the learned judge stated. "I'd rather hear chimes than some of the noises that disturb me in the morning. They used to get going about 1 o'clock in the morning and you should have heard them from that time on. Between the two I'd take the chimes any day."

Battle Not Decided.

The judge's personal preference for chimes over frat houses does not mean that the chimes have won in the decibel battle of Chevy Chase. His honor merely refused to grant a preliminary injunction prior to holding a full hearing with testimony from witnesses.

"This court will not undertake to decide between different religions," Justice Bailey began. "If the long established custom of the Catholic Church has been to sound the Angelus at a particular time, this court is not going to say it is wrong."

"But, your honor," protested Attorney Donald Bowie, jr., speaking for the disturbed 22, "We are not asking you to decide a religious question. We contend those chimes are a nuisance."

Will Hear Testimony.

"Well, I certainly will not enjoin those chimes on a preliminary motion. I'll hear the testimony before I can decide this case," the judge replied.

Michael M. Doyle, attorney for the church, agreed whole-heartedly with the judge's preliminary ruling.

Kin of Reed Seized, Held In Cab Theft

F. B. I. Asked to Return Former Convict for Maryland Trial.

Melborn (Pee Wee) Reed, 21-year-old brother of Willie Reed, Four Corners, Md., alleged killer and kidnaper suspect, was arrested yesterday and, along with Richard Proctor Stockton, charged with holding up Elwood Robertson, colored cab driver of Washington, on November 5 last.

Meantime, States Attorney James H. Pugh, of Montgomery County, took steps to return Willie Reed from Ruston, La., where the "bad boy" of Four Corners is being held for abducting a Ruston cab driver.

Reed, a former convict, is wanted by Montgomery County for the murder of Elwood Matthews, 67-year-old farmer, of Four Corners. After robbing Farmer Matthews on the night of November 21, Reed is alleged to have thrown him into a creek, where he reputedly shot and killed him.

Two Others Accused.

Also accused of taking part in the Matthews murder are Lawrence Gingell, of Kensington, Md., and War Joseph Kirby, of Scranton, Pa.

The same three are suspected of the murder of W. Earl Dollman, 34-year-old Charleston, W. Va., salesman. Dollman was shot and then cremated in his automobile.

State's Attorney Pugh yesterday asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice to return Reed to Rockville on a Federal warrant charging him with stealing an automobile and taking it over State lines.

If the F. B. I. declines to do this, Pugh is prepared to send county officers to the Louisiana town with papers for Reed's extradition.

Reed was arrested Friday night, but the full story of his capture has not yet been learned here. One report was that he was captured in a running gun battle after trying to hold up a gasoline filling station. Captured at the same time was a youth who said he was Alvin Parker.

Fingerprints Identified.

In a telephone conversation with Detective Sergt. Theodore Vollten, of Montgomery County, Sheriff Bryan Thigpen, of Ruston, La., said that Reed identified himself as Morgan. However, the sheriff added, his fingerprints showed conclusively that he was Reed.

Sheriff Thigpen quoted Reed as saying "You'll never keep me in this jail."

In that connection, Sergt. Vollten revealed yesterday that in a conversation with Reed's henchman, Gingell, in the Charles Town, W. Va., jail, Gingell told of trying to help Reed escape from the Rockville Jail last August. The detective quoted Gingell he smuggled three hacksaws and a screw driver in to Reed. The saws were found yesterday, held by wads of chewing gum under a window sill. The screw driver was found over a transom.

With the arrest of Reed, Gingell and Kirby, State's Attorney Pugh said that one of the most vicious gangs in the history of Montgomery County has been smashed. The gang, he said, is suspected of ten major crimes in this vicinity, crimes ranging from robbery to kidnaping and murder. Detective Vollten and Detective Leroy Rodgers have been assigned the task of running down the gang for the past several weeks.

Gielgud Comes To National to Play 'Hamlet'

Capital One of Three Cities Included in Brief Tour of Noted English Actor.

Beginning next Monday night in the National Thetaer and continuing for one week only, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, Guthrie McClintic will present John Gielgud, distinguished British actor, in Will Shakespeare's "Hamlet." This production of the Bard's great tragedy recently shattered long-run records in New York. It is being presented in only three cities outside the metropolis before Mr. Gielgud's return to England in February. Supporting the star is a cast of noteworthy eminence, led by Judith Anderson, Lillian Gish and Arthur Byron. Mail orders are already being accepted and the box-office sale of tickets for this engagement opens today.

"The Plainsman," Cecil B. De Mille's picturization of the story of "Wild Bill" Hickock and "Calamity Jane," will be the chief screen feature at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning on Saturday, instead of the usual Friday. This one-day postponement is due to the fact that "Champagne Waltz," the current attraction at the Palace, did not open until last Friday night at 10 and to complete a week must play through this Friday. In "The Plainsman" are such figures as Gen. Custer, Bill Cody and others who pioneered their way through the Indian Wars with eternal glory to themselves. The principal roles are played by Gary Cooper and Jean Arthur, the costars of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town."

Coming to the screen of the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater tomorrow will be "The Black Legion," a daring and highly melodramatic film that takes its plot from the recent front page headlines in the newspapers relative to the night riding of a notorious band of self-appointed arbiters of public behavior in the Midwest. Humphrey Bogart, as was remarked in this space yesterday, does a masterful job as the chief offender and final confessor in this thrilling story that so closely parallels the K. K. K. dramas of a few years back. The stage bill at the Earle next week will be headlined by Harry Reser and His Clicquot Club Eskimos Orchestra.

Sylvia Sidney will be the pictured star on the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater, beginning tomorrow, in "You Only Live Once," in which Henry Fonda also appears to fine advantage. The story is a grim and somber one that offers very little comedy relief, but it does possess a degree of suspense and a dramatic power that make it impressive fare for screen audiences of adult perception. There is romance, excitement and tragedy in the development of the plot and the leading roles are acted with fine skill by the principals.

Merle Oberon and Brian Aherne are the pictured co-stars of "Beloved Enemy," the foremost feature of the screen bill coming to Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow. This is a Samuel Goldwyn production—which virtually insurs its artistic integrity. Henry Stephenson, David Niven and other Britishers appear in the supporting cast and the film was directed by H. C. Potter. On the stage at the Capitol for the new week, the headline attraction will be Eleanor Holm Jarrett, the Olympic champion whose expulsion from America's last swim team created such a furore when the games were recently held in Berlin. Art Jarrett and his orchestra will augment the stage bill, supported by three additional acts.

The Metropolitan Theater will present Sylvia Sidney as its screen star for the week beginning tomorrow in "The Woman Alone," based on Joseph Conrad's famous novel, "The Secret Agent." Oscar Homolka, who heads the supporting cast, will be remembered for his amazingly realistic impersonation of Oom Paul Kruger, with Walter Huston, in "Rhodes," the screen biographical drama of the diamond master. The cast also includes Desmond Tester, the youthful king in "Nine Days a Queen," and John Loder, popular English leading man. Alfred Hitchcock directed.

Sonja Henie, Olympic champion ice skater, supported by a splendid cast, will play a repeat engagement on F street at the Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow. The title of her vehicle is "One in a Million," and that is approximately what Miss Henie is. She is supported by Jean Hersholt, the Ritz Brothers, and a long list of others.

"Scarface," one of the most vivid of Paul Muni's screen creations, will be revived at the Rialto Theater for the week beginning Sunday. A special supplementary feature will be W. C. Fields and Allison Skipworth in "Tillie and Gus." This is a bill combining the extreme limits of tragedy and hilarity.

"Strange Interlude," the screen version of Eugene O'Neill's Pulitzer Prize play, will be revived at the Little Theater for the week beginning Sunday. The foremost roles in this "marathon drama" are played by Norma Shearer and Clark Gable. This is a film that deserves definite attention from every discriminating theatergoer.

Bozo Snyder, "the man who never speaks," and his great company of burlesquers, featuring Margie Kelly, will make his season's debut at Col. James L. Lake's Gayety Theater on Sunday at the customary matinee performance. The supporting company is a notable one and the chorus is said to be one of the liveliest of the season.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

Cecil Blount De Mille Demonstrates Again His Weird Capacity for Achieving Spectacular Effect

In "The Plainsman," Previewed Yesterday by the Drama Desks, He Has Reverted to Western Realism for a Stirring Drama of the Frontier in the Days of the Indian Wars; President Ball Celebrations Will Be Graced by an Array of Stars; Late News of the Playhouses and Their Stellar Figures.

CECIL B. DE MILLE, whose proud boast it is—and he will tell you so at the slightest provocation—that his motion picture productions have grossed more money at the box offices than those of any other director-producer, has an undeniable genius for sweeping, spectacular effect.

BELL.

He knows his camera angles, his lenses and evidently his cameramen, because not for years has he failed to turn in a "super-special-colossal-terrific" production that has dwarfed most of its contemporary releases.

Go back over the list and see for yourself—citing only a few of his big ones—"The Sign of the Cross," "The Crusades," "Cleopatra," and, if those are too recent, "The Ten Commandments" and "The King of Kings," plus possibly "The Volga Boatmen" and "Male and Female," a clever celluloid transcription of Sir James Matthew Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton."

But the point of all this is that Master Cecil Blount De Mille has gone and done it again in a medium that he has not touched for years.

In "The Plainsman," previewed yesterday afternoon in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange, De Mille has captured something of the heroic spirit of the taming of the West under the sacrificial services of such memorable characters as "Wild Bill" Hickock, William F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill;" Gen. Custer and Gen. Merritt. Sitting Bull, chief of the Sioux tribe, is frequently referred to, but never seen. A few white renegades, selling high-power repeating rifles to the Indians, for the extermination of the whites, are celebrated with gun fire and sudden obsequies and in other ways De Mille has caught a flash of the unbridled fury that marked life on the frontier at about the time of the Battle of the Little Big Horn.

Apart from all this, he has demonstrated again his infinite capacity for producing hair-raising action on the screen. His Indian fights are the last word in realistic slaughter. Horses, men and prairie schooners plunge over embankments, fall and flounder in raging rivers; ground-tumbles that have every appearance of being actually fatal occur with bewildering frequency. In many of the scenes it appears as if Mr. De Mille were trying to kill off his cast, both human and animal.

It all makes very fine box-office, if the days of the Indian Wars mean anything in your catalogue of photodramatic possibilities for blood-chilling diversion.

No one seems to know quite how De Mille achieves these effects—barring, possibly, Mr. De Mille himself—but he can produce more action to the square inch of film than any other director in the business. You will realize this when you see "The Plainsmen," as assuredly you will when it opens at Loew's Palace on Saturday. Saturday, not Friday.

There will be a slightly more conventional review of this subject in this space on Saturday morning.

Why wait until Monday, when we have already seen the picture? I ask you.

• • • •

Elaborate plans have been made, needless to say, for the appropriate public welcome to be accorded Jean Harlow and Robert Taylor when they arrive in Wasnington for the President Birthday Ball celebration Friday morning at 8:35 o'clock.

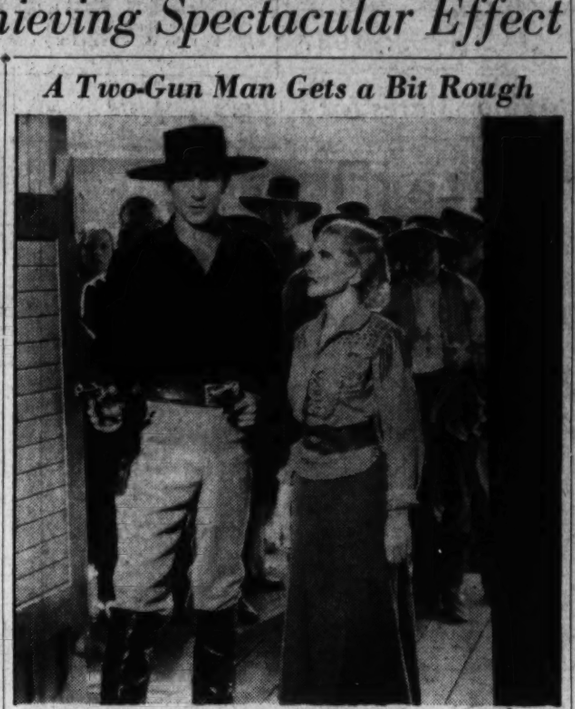
Anticipation Note.

And so to lunch with the D'Oyly Carte Company, which I so greatly admire. More of this at another time.

A Two-Gun Man Gets a Bit Rough



This would be "Wild Bill" Hickock and his Western frontier gal friend, Calamity Jane, in Cecil B. De Mille's vastly exciting picturization of "The Plainsmen," to be seen on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning Saturday. These roles are played, as anyone can plainly see, by Gary Cooper, as the quick-shooting hero, and Jean Arthur, as the heroic Jane. These are the two that did such wonders with "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town." They do almost as much with this one.

National

"THE MIKADO." The D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, from London, presents the Gilbert and Sullivan operetta in two acts, with scenery, costumes and properties designed by Charles Ricketts. R. A. Orchestra under the conductorship of Isidore Godfrey. At the National Theater.

That sturdy old warhorse of the Gilbert and Sullivan repertoire of Savoyard operettas, "The Mikado," with which the fortnight's engagement, now in its second week, opened in the National Theater a week ago last Monday night, was repeated at both matinee and evening performances by the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, from London, yesterday.

Probably most familiar of all the operas composed by these two richly endowed collaborators, "The Mikado," nevertheless, as performed by these matchless artists, takes on new stature and new verve as a work that seems to promise a definite immortality. The lines, lyrics and songs are interpreted with such complete fidelity to the original Gilbert and Sullivan prompt book that nothing of the flavor of the authors' intent is lost.

Martyn Green, whose versatility is one of the marvels of the theater, plays Ko-Ko, Lord High Executioner, with a droll and pathetic humor that completely fulfills the function of the part in presenting a figure of bewildered and helpless futility confronted by problems of a most annoying and threatening nature. Sydney Granville's Pooh-Bah is another character of noble worth and Evelyn Gardiner sings Katisha with robust contralto effectiveness. Derek Oldham is a romantic Nanki-Poo, whose "A Wandering Minstrel I" scores tremendously.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDDLER

Settin' Around

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 27.

Warners studio is going colossal in large fashion. With piles of surplus cash on hand, the company is building new stages, rather than pay out excess taxes. One new stage is the largest in Hollywood, and now RKO will have to build another to regain the honor. So anxious were company officials to use it that a replica of Westminster Abbey was raised on the foundation, and the stage walls and roof built around the set.

ALAN MOWBRAY.

Some day I will learn not to attempt to "gag" professional gagsters. Snooping through a studio this morning, I came upon Harpo Marx reclining on a bed which had been set up for the next scene. "Why don't you do your resting in chairs as other actors do?" I asked. "Sssshhh!" warned Harpo, "I'm an undercover man!"

Richard Arlen and I have discovered a little thing that starts small wars, and the explanation may amuse you: This morning we paused at a corner to buy a newspaper. The newsboy was busy, but a red-headed pal seized a copy and rushed it to us. Arlen gave him a nickel (the paper cost 3 cents) and said, "Keep the pennies." A few minutes later we repassed the corner, and the two boys were fighting. Dick stopped and learned that the 2 cents change was the raison de guerre. The newsboy claimed the pennies because it was his paper that had been sold. The other lad said the extra change had been given to him.

To bring peace, Arlen shelled out two dimes which he dropped into as many palms. When we left, both kids were in full grin. But I couldn't help wondering what happened when the newsboy aroused himself to the fact that he still had come out second—10 cents to the other boy's 12.

Alan Mowbray, doing some plain and fancy comedy stuff for "Marry the Girl," confided today that he thoroughly dislikes himself on the screen. "I always look like a cross between a sick barracuda and a toothless lion," he groaned. I sympathized with him. While I have never seen an ill barracuda, I see toothless lions working in jungle pictures constantly, and they look pretty bad. Mowbray has seen himself in only one complete picture, and then for the darndest reason. "I did a magic trick in it," he told me, "and I had to see the picture to be convinced that I had done it."

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

NEW YORK, JAN. 27.

PUBLICITY OFFICES at MGM received a letter from a Cuban magazine last week asking for photos of Robert Taylor. The fans in Havana, the letter stated, had evinced interest in the screen star. "So," was the plea, "would you please send us photos of Mr. Taylor— desnudo or semi-desnudo?" . . . The Town Casino, costing $200,000, opened in Miami the other day, featuring a sign: "America's Foremost Cuisine." Next door the Roadside Rest opened a small hot-dog stand, with a sign: "America's Foremost Frankfurters." The stand is earning a fortune . . . Despite newspaper reports, Norma Shearer didn't return to Hollywood last week. Saturday she saw "You Can't Take It With You." The audience applauded for her between acts—until Norma took a bow.

A. E. MATTHEWS, who, according to legend, for years has been sending his laundry to England, to be laundered there, is now denying the rumor. The best pieces, he insists, he now washes and irons himself.

THE CANARY in "Howdy, Stranger," in which Frank Parker stars, escaped Saturday night and disrupted the show by flying and whistling all over the theater. That's the first time in Broadway history that the bird got the actors . . . Fritz Lang, the Viennese director, cut quite a figure when he arrived here last week. Lang wore a corrugated monocle, with the edges ratcheted to prevent slipping . . .

WHEN GEORGE WHITE heard that his "Scandals" was stranded in Columbus because of floods, he offered Johnnie Weissmuller a job in the show . . .

BERT ACOSTA and Eddie Schneider, who just returned from Spain, will enter the Lindbergh Annniversary race to Paris . . . The papers didn't report that Gretchen Schneider, Eddie's wife, was jailed for 18 hours by the loyalists for whom her husband was flying—because she has a German name . . . Gene Fowler, made an honorary police officer in Los Angeles, was awakened at 3 a. m. by Harry Brandt, the movie publicist. "Go to Hollywood & Vine," Brandt whispered. "Holdup!"

THE DRAMA CRITICS, who received a box containing a live garter snake at their Critics Circle meeting, haven't discovered the culprit as yet. They all suspect a major press agent . . . Louise Duke, who came here a month ago heralded as Europe's favorite feminine maestro, has a job. She's modeling for Sculptor T. C. Neary—heir to the Cunningham realty millions . . .

BING CROSBY has arranged for Butch Towers, the Broadway bookie with whom he bets, to appear in the next Crosby picture. Towers will portray a bookie . . . The La Follette Committee last night received the secret report it requested, regarding the ban on picketing in Hudson County . . . For the first time since newspaper men remember, the Times has had a wholesale dismissal among its staff . . . The Nicholas Bros., returning here next month after a long tour of Europe, have received offers to appear here at Loew's State and the Paramount. But Herman Stark, their manager, will book them first into Harlem's Apollo, to appease the Harlemites . . . Bred to Run

By Walter Haight

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE.

The Killer.

If the arrival of Miss Dorothy in front of my stall had served to put my mind in a state of anxious anticipation, the reaction to her choice to ride Sergeant instead of me was a ringing sensation in my head. I was furious now. I had a feeling that must be related to the mind of a mad dog.

After Sergeant had been taken out of the stable and I was left alone, I became a wild horse. I circled the stall with my head shaking from side to side. There was foam in my mouth. I stopped and kicked the side of my stall. Demons of some sort danced in my head.

I had been scorned—scorned by one whom I thought loved me. I was useless in this world. Miss Dorothy HAD her chance to recognize me. Perhaps she did and took the other horse purposely. I WAS BEGINNING TO HATE MISS DOROTHY. Nothing mattered. I was through. I was as good as dead. I would die in a little while. I must die. Was there anything to live for?

Yes, I did hate Miss Dorothy. I hated everything.

I heard Foreman Perkins talking. He came into the stable.

"I told you, sir, that I didn't have a horse suitable for riding. We have 42 head out in the park now. If you will have a seat, or come back in perhaps an hour, some of the horses will be back and I will give you the first one," said Foreman Perkins.

"Let me see that horse you said was here," came a man's voice. "I haven't done much riding. I just want a horse that will walk along. Perhaps the one you have will do."

I looked out of the stall door. I saw at once that this man was a novice. He wore new riding breeches, a new polo shirt and a cap. I could tell by his manner that he had seldom, if ever, ridden a horse.

I hated him. I did not want to go out. I didn't want to do anything but stay in this stall and die.

IF THAT MAN RIDES ME I WILL KILL HIM. I will run away. I'll throw him off and maybe his head will hit against a rock. Man's love for a horse——. That's bunko. Yes, I will kill that fellow if he rides me.

"He looks all right to me," said the young man, "Let me take him out."

"Well, you might have to dismount and lead him back," replied Foreman Perkins.

I said I would kill this fellow and I WOULD kill. I would try to act nice until we were out of sight of the stable—and then——.

I stood while he climbed into my saddle. He dumped his weight on my backbone. He tossed the reins a little. I began to walk. I felt stronger now. I had work to do. I WAS ABOUT TO AVENGE MYSELF WITH THE WORLD.

Now was the time. I bolted forward. As I did the young man fell over my neck. I galloped, shaking from side to side. I heard his scream. I liked that.

Now I'll try to knock him against a tree. I'm off the path. There's a tree. He's still on. I'll go under that branch; maybe it will knock him senseless—then I can trample him.

I went under the branch. I heard the wood strike him. He groaned. But he stayed on. He had one arm around my neck and the other wrapped in my mane. I kept running. I had lost all sense of direction. I was in the woods, off the path. I ran downhill, shaking my head up and down. The stirrups hit against my sides. I tried to throw him.

We were on the path again. The young man was yelling. I would jump off the creek bridge when we went across—I'd kill him—I'd drown him. I'd——.

I listened a moment. There was another horse following me.

IT WAS MISS DOROTHY.

Miss Dorothy—no, no, no—I didn't hate Miss Dorothy. She would catch me. SHE MUST CATCH ME. What was I doing anyway? If she wanted me to stop, I would stop.

I slowed down just as Miss Dorothy rode up, reached and grabbed the side of my bridle. As she did so, the young man almost pulled her off her horse.

We were stopped now. I was panting. Miss Dorothy held me tightly.

"That was a close one," said the young man in a shaky voice as he slid off my back.

"Well, you certainly did a neat job of keeping on his back," replied Miss Dorothy, "why, I believe that I would have been knocked off at the top of the hill. The branches were bouncing from your head."

"I believe I'm all together. It was lucky YOU came along. Which way is it to the stable?"

"The horse has calmed down now. Perhaps he had a fit of some sort. You might as well ride back to the stable. I will hold him. If you survived that Paul Revere ride, you will have nothing to fear," said Miss Dorothy.

The young man climbed into my saddle. He had nothing to fear now. I hoped Miss Dorothy would never release that grip she had on me.

"This is only the fourth time I was ever on a horse," he replied.

"Well, you're getting along wonderfully. I was practically raised with horses. My father has a farm—mostly race horses. I had a race horse of my own once," said Miss Dorothy.

"That must have been fun to watch him run and to bet on him. Did he ever win?" he asked.

"Oh, yes, he won. His name was Flat Tire. Wasn't that cute. Father and I went away and stayed in Switzerland for five years. When we returned, we learned that our trainer had allowed Flat Tire to be sold or claimed, as we call it. The trainer almost wrecked dad's horses and he's in jail now for stealing."

"Was Flat Tire bred on your farm?" he asked.

"No, we bought him. Father's car had a blowout one day and while the chauffeur was fixing the tire, I saw a little black colt in the field. He had a white ring around one of his legs. Later I begged father to go back to the farm and buy the colt. He finally consented and——."

"I get it. Flat tire on the car—so you named the colt Flat Tire," said the young man.

"That's right. Cute, don't you think? I would give anything to find Flat Tire. I did trace him through the racing papers. The last time he ever raced was about two years ago at a small track," said Miss Dorothy.

If she only knew. I looked up at her. She was leading Flat Tire, not Blackie.

Yes, Miss Dorothy here I am—right at you side. I'm a good horse. That was the first time I ever ran away in my life. Don't you know me? It was I who ran around the field. I was going to win that Derby for you, Miss Dorothy.

"We'll there's the stable. Mr. ———?" said Miss Dorothy. "Bill Hamilton's the name, and yours?" he asked.

"Holbrook—Dorothy Holbrook," she replied.

"I guess I had better tell the foreman about this horse. He's going to kill somebody," said Hamilton.

"Yes, I would," replied Miss Dorothy.

We were in front of the stable. Some of the horses were being sponged down by the paddock. Persons who had been riding were driving away in their cars.

Foreman Perkins came up.

Miss Dorothy still held my bridle. I kept my head still. I did not want her to let me go. I hoped that she would recognize me. But hadn't she recommended that I be reported to Foreman Perkins? She

Louis Floored By Sparmate In Bout

'Just Slipped,' Laughs Joe; Pastor Surer Now of Knockout.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 27.—Renewed hope flared in Bob Pastor's fight camp as reports filtered into town that Joe Louis had been knocked down while sparring with Eddie Malcolm, Harlem Negro, in a workout at Pompton Lakes today.

Although the portly Louis, laughingly insisting he had merely slipped, went on to give Malcolm a thorough dusting off, at least two newspapermen at the ringside claimed the Brown Bomber was knocked down and that he looked bad while falling.

Louis, taking the Pastor fight seriously, looked good as he opened his day's sparring drill against Irish Mickey Glynn, of New York. He battered Glynn, knocking him out after a minute of fighting. He then took Malcolm on for a scheduled two rounder. No sooner had they started to exchange blows than Louis was on the canvas.

Down From Clean Blow.

George Barton, sports editor of the Minneapolis Tribune, and John Carmichael, of the Chicago Daily News, said Malcolm cracked Louis on the head and that he went down under a clean blow. Others at ringside were of the opinion that Louis mistimed a punch and fell. At any rate the Bomber arose and gave Malcolm a terrific thumping, then boxed two more rounds with Glynn.

Pastor, reported to be in peak condition took things easy. He jogged around Central Park and spent the rest of the day reading detective stories or playing cards.

Odds 7 to 1 on Louis.

Odds still were overwhelmingly in favor of Louis and a quick knockout victory. Long-shot players were getting 7 to 1 against a decision for Pastor and 12 to 1 against a knockout win for the New Yorker. Strangely enough, quite a few bets, al small, were being made.

"Funny thing," said Johnston, "but I note the fight writers have become long-shot players. They're all betting on Pastor."

The writers still were unanimous in their opinion that Louis would win quickly, most of them agreeing that Pastor didn't have the punch or the style to bring the Bomber down.

Overlin Wins; Verdict Booed

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan. 27.—Ken Overlin, fighting sailor boy from Richmond, Va., pulled an upset tonight by winning a ten-round decision over Fred Apostoli, San Francisco middleweight. The decision drew boos from the house.

Apostoli, making his New York ring debut with a great record behind him along the Pacific Coast, was a 2-to-1 favorite, but couldn't solve the long, rapier-like lefts that the Virginia tossed into his face all during the fight.

Overlin took the wind out of the former San Francisco bellhop's sails in the first round. Rushing out and catching the West Coast middleweight unawares, he pumped long, hard lefts to his face and had him groggy.

Vines Now 2 Up; Perry Is Defeated

By the Associated Press.

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 27.—Ellsworth Vines defeated Fred Perry 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, here tonight in the twelfth match of their cross country series.

Jewish Paper Here Urges Fight Boycott

Hearty support of the anti-Nazi League's boycott of the scheduled Braddock-Schmeling prize fight is offered today in this week's edition of the Washington Jewish Review by David Mondzac, editor.

Pointing out that Schmeling has taken back to Germany $110,000 in American money for his last three fights in America, Mondzac cites the Nazi laws prohibiting the flow of money from Germany.

The Ledger also observes that Joe Gould, Jewish manager of Braddock, has taken cognizance of the boycott to the point of urging that the fight be called off because of the probability of lean gate receipts.

Eleanor Holm to Write Swim Articles for Post; Famed Star to Give Exhibition for D. C. Fans

Backstroke Specialist Is Scheduled to Appear on Capitol Stage.

Eleanore Holm, the 22-year-old swimming sensation and stormy petrel of the 1936 Olympics, will begin a series of signed articles giving inside facts on big league swimming in general and the Olympics in particular in The Post tomorrow.

The aquatic star, who is almost as famed for her beauty as for her backstroke swimming ability, will give an exhibition of the prowess that won her renown in the water in a special program arranged by The Washington Post next Monday afternoon.

The beautiful young swimmer holds 11 national backstroke records, the world 150-yard backstroke record and the Olympic Championship and record for the 100-meter backstroke, which she set in 1932.

After the 1932 Olympics, Miss Holm set many national records. In April, 1934, she set two new records in a race against time, being clocked at 2:51 flat at 200 meters and 2:51.9 in the 220-yard backstroke.

The following December, in the National Olympic stars meet in Miami, Miss Holm navigated the 150-yard backstroke in the record time of 1:52 and the 100-yard backstroke in 1:10 4-5.

Shortly after the Olympic meet Miss Holm entered the movies and later went on a stage tour with her husband, whom she married in September, 1932.

Came the 1936 Olympics and Miss Holm fell afoul of officials, who had her barred for alleged violation of training rules, thus starting a controversy that has not yet completely subsided.

Court Tourney Dtes Are Set By A.A.U.

The District A. A. U. basketball championship tournament which The Washington Post sponsors annually will not start until the latter part of February or the first week in March, it was decided last night at an important meeting of the A. A. U. at the Central Y. M. C. A.

A definite opening date will be assigned by the basketball committee headed by Winfree Johnson at a special meeting next week.

The committee had planned to raise the curtain on perhaps the biggest basketball show in the South Atlantic section February 15. No gym as yet has definitely been selected. Tech High, Roosevelt High and Heurich are under consideration. Heurich's court was the scene of the 1936 championship.

No Team to Denver.

In changing the starting dates the local A. A. U. does not intend to concentrate on sending a team to the National Championship at Denver, as it did last year. This year's National will start March 15.

The annual District A. A. U. boxing championship will be held at Turner's Arena either the second or third week in March, Dr. O. U. Singer, reported. April 12, 13, 14 are the dates of the National A. A. U. boxing classic at Boston Garden, and the District will probably send a few of its champions.

Appointment of James Sullivan, of Washington, as vice chairman of the National Boxing Committee was announced by A. Earle Weeks, president of the local A. A. U. chapter. The following local men were either appointed or renamed on National Committees:

Committees Named.

Boxing, Dr. O. U. Singer; chairman of redistributing, Eddie Rosenbloom; wrestling, Tom Clayton; basketball, Winfree Johnson; handball, Ralph Foster; swimming vice chairman, A. Earle Weeks; long distance running, Jerry Looney; registration and records, A. Joe Aronoff; track, Dorsey Griffith.

Ralph Foster, Y. M. C. A. physical director, suggested that the District A. A. U. send the winner of the handball championship to the National in Chicago. The A. A. U. looked favorably on this recommendation.

McTigue Forgives Irish Attackers

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—The forgiving Irish heart of Mike McTigue, former world's light heavyweight boxing champion, today brought a suspended sentence for two men who attacked him January 16 because they thought he was a Nazi sympathizer.

"We're all Irishmen and I wasn't hurt much," Mike told Magistrate Leonard McGee, another Irishman, when James Carr, 27, and Frank McElhatton, 34, were arraigned on a charge of felonious assault. "I lost a couple of teeth and got a couple of black eyes, but I don't want to press any charges against them."

The magistrate reduced the charge to disorderly conduct, found them guilty and suspended sentence.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Sports writers are traditionally free with their superlatives. In the lexicon of the sports page authors, such descriptives as courageous, gallant, heroic, back-to-the-wall and lion-hearted are ever handy, to be tossed off at the faintest display of physical fortitude.

POVICH.

Thus it is that an earnest young man who is collecting, say $10,000 per annum for pitching big league baseball, is labeled as the personification of pluck if he strikes out a batter with three on and the score tied. And the maker of a flying tackle that saves a football game is no less than a transcendent hero, the sports writers would have you know.

The guy who sinks a ten-foot putt to square his match in a big tournament is very apt to be hailed as the possessor of a bottomless fount of courage and the pug who foolishly gets up off the floor for the fourth time to run into another right to the chin is rarely called a foolish pug. The chances are he will be described as gallant, old, iron-jawed Joe Doakes.

And so, when the real thing comes along—that great and lofty virtue known as courage that draws its tough fibres from the heart—the sports page author may recognize it but little remains in his vocabulary to justify it. Overusage of the word has profaned it. Such hackneyed phrases as courage and gallantry no longer can describe adequately the naked fortitude that springs from the heart.

Too often has physical strength and skill, and luck in competition been mistaken for courage, but in the case of one of baseball's heroes there can be no mistake. The heroism of Bruce Campbell, Cleveland outfielder who is this week a visitor in Washington, is as genuine as the report of Roosevelt's re-election.

For such as Bruce Campbell, some special sort of encomium must be reserved. This scion of the Clan Campbell has, in the past two years, emerged three times from the valley of the shadows to go back to his job in the Cleveland outfield, fighting his way back to health with the strength that comes from the region of the heart alone.

Spinal meningitis was his malady—the dread disease that is almost synonymous with death. Doctors marveled as the 190-pound, 6-foot outfielder fought off the ravages of the germ in a Detroit hospital in the summer of 1935 and earned his discharge three weeks after the "bug" was discovered.

And then, in October of that same year as Campbell prepared to journey to Detroit for the World Series, a dizziness overtook him. In a Chicago hospital his case was diagnosed as a recurrence of meningitis. Rare had been those who survived a second attack. And doctors marveled again as Campbell, somewhere, found the courage to beat back once more the inroads of the germ.

Back to the Cleveland outfield Campbell went last season, apparently completely recovered. But 14 days after the season started, in Boston, he again was in a hospital. He asked doctors to search again for his meningitis "bug." It was there; all of Campbell's teammates were quarantined, and the brown-haired outfielder's case became a prime topic in medical journals.

Medical science could help the lad only to a limited point. Campbell's recovery depended as much on his own moral and physical fortitude. While the medical world watched, eager to note the developments in this rare second recurrence of the malady, Campbell gave battle with an utterly wilful desire to live, and won.

Yesterday, as he visited at the Twenty-second street home of Ray Porter, a school-day chum, Campbell could laugh. An amazing picture of rare good health, tanned by the sun on the Florida west coast and the new possessor of a huge loving cup presented him by Philadelphia baseball writers for making the most courageous comeback of the 1936 season, Campbell did laugh.

"That was funny, the day I came down with that sickness the first time out in Detroit," he related. "It was during a double-header, and there were 38,000 in the park. I had already made three hits in five times at bat, but I was beginning to feel a dizziness. The Tigers sent in Schoolboy Rowe as a relief pitcher and the cheers of that mob sounded like a clap of thunder to me.

"I found out later that meningitis makes a man's hearing very acute for some reason. Anyway, I could almost hear 'em whispering in the Detroit dugout. I knew something was wrong and I asked Manager Walter Johnson to take me out of the ball game.

"At the hospital the next day, they wouldn't tell me at first what was wrong. Then they wouldn't say meningitis. They wanted to let me down easy, I guess. They said it was cerebral spinal fever.

"I sent for a dictionary, looked it up. There it was—'cerebral spinal fever, spinal meningitis, highly fatal, the subject intolerant of light and sound with paralysis of the limbs occurring, perhaps, in the final stages. Death might come from a sudden fit or from gradual exhaustion.'

"Nice to contemplate, huh?" and Campbell smiled.

Local Golfer Is Ousted by Patty Berg

Helen Dettweiler Bows, 3 and 1, in Quarterfinal of Florida Play.

Minneapolis Star Gets Par on 5 of the Last 8 Holes to Triumph.

By the Associated Press.

Punta Gorda, Fla., Jan. 27.—Patty Berg, sensational strawberry blonde golfer from Minneapolis, had to overcome a one-hole lead held by Helen Dettweiler at the turn to eliminate the fighting Washington, D. C., star, 3 and 1, and enter the semifinals of the Charlotte Harbor women's golf tournament today.

Little Patty's victory came only after a streak of par shooting on the back nine, where she captured five of the last eight holes.

Tomorrow the smooth-stroking Minneapolis red-haired girl will engage Jane Cothren, of Greenville, S. C., who won from Mrs. Al Nelson, of Sarasota, Fla., 4 and 2.

Is Good Going Out.

The other semifinals battle will bring together Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., medalist, and Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I. Miss Hemphill removed Mrs. Carrie Seay, of Fort Myers, Fla., 6 and 5, while Miss Bauer, 1 down on the tenth, came back to defeat Helen Hockenjos, of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., on the nineteenth hole.

Miss Dettweiler played consistently fine golf on the outgoing journey against Patty. Miss Berg won the second with a par, and the Washington girl sank a 20-yard approach shot on the third to win with a birdie deuce.

Patty won the fifth with a birdie, and Helen the sixth when the Minneapolis girl encountered trouble in the woods. They halved the next two holes in fours, and Miss Dettweiler won the ninth with a four to go one up as Patty three-putted.

It was entirely different on the back side. A tree stymied Miss Dettweiler's second shot, and Patty won the tenth with a par to go one up. Miss Berg went two up with pars on the twelfth and thirteenth, and she became three up by winning the fifteenth with a par.

Helen got her par three on the sixteenth to keep the match alive, but on the seventeenth she hooked her second into a pond, and Miss Berg won the match.

Hagen Divorce Suit Charges Desertion

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 27.—Walter Hagen, nationally known professional golfer, was sued for divorce in Chancery Court today on a charge of desertion.

His wife, Edna C. Hagen, of Deal, N. J., said they were married April 30, 1923, at a New York hotel. She claims he deserted her in March, 1926, while they were wintering in Florida.

In her petition she gave Hagen's present address as Detroit and asked that she be allowed to retain his name.

Berg Is Hero, Shooting 5 Baskets

Meyer, Sullivan Stand Out for Army in First Meeting of Teams.

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 27.—In its first athletic contest with the U. S. Military Academy, George Washington University's five this afternoon rallied to score a thrilling 33-to-29 victory over a hard fighting Cadet team. With Clarence Berg, a substitute, and little Milt Schonfeld ramming in the decisive goals during the last six minutes.

Army appeared well on the way to winning when Capt. Monk Meyer and Riggs Sullivan, its football heroes, found the netting in the first part of the second half. Meyer, a smooth working, speedy forward, and Sullivan, a guard whose leech-like guarding held down the usually high scoring Ben Goldfaden, combined their offensive work to run the figures to 28 to 21 with six minutes remaining.

Tommy O'Brien's three field goals had kept the Colonials in the running in the opening half and but for Berg things would have been easier for Army in the second. Just when it looked as if the Cadets were running away with the game O'Brien interrupted their march with a shot close under the basket and Berg scored the fourth of his five fielders on a dazzling dribble and lay-up shot.

Schoenfeld Stars.

At this juncture with only 2 minutes left, the midget Schonfeld took command and at Meyer's expense, sank two fancy snow birds after dribbling past the celebrated Army athlete to place the Colonials in the lead, never to be headed again. In the next few wild moments both Schoenfeld and Berg scored again as the Cadets frantically tried to take possession of the ball. The Cadets' desperate guarding, however, only made them easy prey for G. W.'s sure ball handling and tricky feints and dribbles.

The first half was closely though not brilliantly fought with Army holding a 15 to 13 advantage at intermission. The Cadets worked their block play with precision, scoring three goals almost unhampered as Colonial defense men were taken out of the play.

George Washington got away to a 4 to 0 lead on Kiesel's fine layup at the expense of Rogner and O'Brien's follow shot, but Captain Monk Meyer and Brinker attended to the business of catching the Colonials quickly. Two quick goals by O'Brien sent G. W. ahead 9 to 6, with 9 minutes remaining, but the Cadets stormed back on goals by Rogner, Sullivan and Brinker and a pair of free throws by Rogner to hold the advantage for the last 5 minutes.

Sweep Like Sets New Track Record for 7 Furlongs at Hialeah

Six-Year-Old Conquers Liberal

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 27 (AP).—Running seven furlongs in the new track record time of 1:22 3-5 and only three-fifths of a second slower than the world record held jointly by Roseben and Clang, T. D. Buhl's Sweep Like won the featured grade "A" handicap in a hard drive here today. A half length behind the 6-year-old son of Sweep-Lady Braxted came T. B. Martin's Liberal to earn the place by a length and a half over Ogden Phipps' favored White Cockade.

Jimmy Stout was astride Sweep Like, which carried 108 pounds, and it was the Jersey lad's second score of the afternoon. The winner paid $13 for $2.

The eight race card, including the regular Wednesday "Helpful" Purse for charity, was headed by a series of graded handicaps. In the grade "B" event the track record had been equaled by Blind Pig, so the creation of a new mark in the feature hardly came as a surprise. The old mark was 1:22 4-5, with Cathop and Count Morse the co-holders.

Liberal ran a game race. He first had Bill Donoghue as a running rival, the pair speeding along head and head until overtaken by Sweep Like at the entrance to the stretch. Bill Donoghue stopped but Liberal fought it out, finding Sweep Like a bit too much for him. White Cockade again failed an army of backers. He raced close enough up to have a winning chance but could not menace the leaders despite hard urging.

Denemark Entry Wins.

Today's program was only one race old when Mrs. Emil Denemark, sensational pacesetter for rival owners at the meeting, was represented by a winner, Radio Charm.

It was the colt's second straight score, but it was tinged with luck. The son of Jean Lafitte, after blocking Our Ketcham on the rail, went on to score in a photo finish over Witch Hazel. The first two horses were grouped in the field. Our Ketcham was third, a half length off the leaders, and the boy claimed foul, but to no avail. Radio Charm held sway all the way, with Witch Hazel and Our Ketcham always the contenders. The field paid $3.80 for $2. The time for the 3 furlongs was 0:35.

ENFIN came around field on turn and got place in final stride. TOP RADIO was hard ridden all through the stretch. DUCHESS REIGH finished with a rush on the outside. JUB JUB quit badly after showing early speed.

Selections at Hialeah Park.

Dear Al:

Here is the telegram sent to Admiral Cary T. Grayson, head of the American Red Cross, today by J. E. Widener, president of the Miami Jockey Club: "Hialeah Park, as a sincere expression of sympathy, is offering four races, one on each of the following days, Thursday and Friday of this week and Monday and Friday of next week, for the benefit of the flood sufferers in this sad catastrophe stop the proceeds will be turned over to the Red Cross here for proper distribution." That's what I call the proper spirit. Now that the track is helping the flood sufferers, I'm appealing to the Benningites, friends of Flat Tire, friends and enemies of Walter Haight, horse enthusiasts, horse-players, bookmakers and everyone else. Jack Sullivan, the lawyer, and Norman Nolan, mayor of Northeast, have promised to start the ball rolling with a generous contribution to the Bill Bennings-Flat Tire Flood Fund. Let's help the Red Cross get those unfortunates out of the muddy going. Let's show them that those who like racing are willing to do their part and then some. A dime was the limit on the toy fund and more than 700 dimes rolled in. There is no limit to the flood fund. Send in what you can, whether it is a dime or a ten spot—but let's have them. Make your checks or money orders payable to The American Red Cross. Mail them to The Washington Post, Bennings-Flat Tire Flood Fund. Let's go.

BILL.

First Race—Bold Turk appears to be a fair sort of juvenile and one with a good chance of getting home in front of this bulky field. Stormy Sea is handicapped by breaking off the rail but, if away alertly, he may show to advantage. Maevel is a possibility.

Second Race—Sorceress seems nicely placed in this field. Westrope will do the riding and I anticipate a victory. High Mabel is a threat. Company has shown enough to warrant respect.

Fourth Race—Eli Yale seems to have run himself into condition and deserves a top ranking despite the 117-pound assignment. Idle Midget and Par for the place and show.

Fifth Race—More News, in with a steadying 108 pounds, may be the right one in this test. Wagner is slated to do the riding. Bright Haven likes the route but that 120 pounds may prove too much of an assignment. Narise has been consistent enought to be close here.

Sixth Race—Noel H. promises to do a lot of running in this company. Gets in well due to the apprentice allowance and has a good post position. Four Eleven is a threat. Anglo Saxon to take care of the others.

Seventh Race—Watch Him likes an off track and mud-running horses are at home on the turf. I'm going to put this one on top and root. The Sokol entry of Thirteen Stars and Peedeeque is formidable. Chambersburger may be up in time to cause trouble.

Best Bet—Eli Yale.

Schmarr, C. U. Star, Hewing Self a Niche in Cagers Hall of Fame

Scoring Total Of 130 Points Leads All

31 Points in Game Last Week Set Something of a Record.

Duke Coach Labels Him Best Ever to Play on That Court.

With a fine old Dutch hand, a couple of them, to be exact, husky Hermie Schmarr, of Catholic University, this winter is indelibly inscribing his name in basketball's hall of fame, hewing a niche for himself in those hallowed precincts with an amazing scoring record.

The transplanted New Britain boy with the barrel chest, muscular arms and bouncer's demeanor already is assured of at least a minor station in local sports annals by virtue of the 31 points he scored against Shenandoah College last week. But when he followed up with a 25-point performance against V. P. I. he got a fresh start toward a season's record that may surpass all previous efforts in that direction.

With a total of 51 field goals and 28 foul shots—130 points—the master of ceremonies of the Cardinals' floor show is away out in front of the field and getting hotter with each game. His closest rival is a teammate, Wayne Ambrose, another stocky chap possessed of a good scoring eye.

Called Best Ever.

Although Hermie pyramided his record score against a small team of doubtful qualifications, Shenandoah, he has been consistently good against every team the Cards have met thus far. Ted Mann, of Duke University, proclaimed him the greatest basketball player ever seen on the Blue Devils' court, and good courtmen in that section have been legion. Against Duke Schmarr made 13 points.

He totaled 15 points against Duquesne, keeping his mates in the running until the visitor's five-man attack overcame his lone efforts. Only one team, St. Thomas, of Scranton, Pa., has succeeded in holding him scoreless from the field, and, on Coach "Fod" Cotton's authority, Schmarr was ailing that night.

Draws Two Guards.

Handicapped as Catholic is numerically, the great burden of collecting points naturally has fallen on the Dutchman's broad shoulders, and he has borne it well. Every team meeting the Cards points for him, usually assigning an extra man to guard him, but he overcomes this added precaution with a peculiar shot started from the pate of his head. He throws the ball with either hand, is an expert team player and passer, and can uphold his end defensively.

Trailing Schmarr at this writing are Ambrose with 80 points, O'Brien (G. W.), 75, Goldfaden (G. W.) 71, Kiesel (G. W. 69, Butterworth (G. W.) 66, Thomas (Md.) 62, Schonfeld (G. W.) 60, Knepley (Md.) 50, Waters (Md.) 44.

Collegians Win 13th.

The Fort Humphrey's Collegians ran their consecutive victory strong to 13 tonight, the Jewish Community Center being the unlucky victim. The losers held a 16-12 lead at half time but succumbed to the sharp-shooting of Rehkoff in the final period. He led the scorers with 14 points.

Suhr Mild Holdout.

San Francisco, Jan. 27 (AP).—Holding out for more money, Gus Suhr, first baseman of the Pittsburgh Pirates, said today he has rejected his 1937 contract, but added:

"I know everything will turn out alright. They've always treated me fine."

Typewriter Grays Win.

The United Typewriter Grays defeated Stewart Brothers Photographers, 37-23, in a Community Center League game Tuesday night. It was erroneously reported that the Grays, who were undefeated, were defeated.

City's Leading Scorer Displays Firm Grip on Ball

Brewers Meet Willigs Five Saturday.

Undefeated in seven straight Sunday home games, the Heurich professional basketball team will attempt to defeat the one team it has never been able to beat. The Brewers meet the Pittsburgh Willigs in a two-game series at the Heurich court, Twenty-sixth and D streets northwest.

The Willigs, who have thumped the Brewers four times in the last three seasons, will appear here Saturday night and again Sunday afternoon.

Heurich sought only a Sunday game, but the Willigs, victors in 14 out of their last 16 games, winners of 45 out of 49 last season, agreed only on the two-game series.

Led by Don Smith, All-American in 1932-33, the Willigs will have three former University of Pittsburgh aces in their line-up. Smith, rated the best forward ever developed by Doc H. C. Carlson, Panther coach, is one of 'em. The others are Tim Lawry and Bill Hughes, both former Pitt captains. All three have played against Georgetown in Eastern collegiate games at Tech High.

Also remembered by college basketball followers is Teddy Riggs, erstwhile Carnegie Tech captain, who will play forward for the Willigs.

Others on the Willig team are Johnny ("Slim") Zelzenik, secured from the national champion Wilmerding Y. M. C. A. team, Olympic tryout semifinalist last season, and Ivy Brenner, former Duquesne ace.

Backer Chris Heurich plans to start Saturday night's game early to permit those planning to go to the President's Ball to get there on time. Sunday's game will go on at 3:30. Preliminaries will be arranged for both contests.

Heurich broke even Sunday, winning an extra-period game from the famous New York Whirlwinds, and losing to the same team in New York in a terrific letdown.

Y. M. C. A. in Victories.

Three Y. M. C. A. teams won games last night on their home court. The Hawks defeated Northeast Boys' Club, 16-12; the Eagles won from Falls Church A. C., 44-13 and the Flashes beat Bel Haven Cleaners, 30-20.

Woodson to Decide On A.U. Job Today

By the Associated Press.

Conway, Ark., Jan. 27.—Coach Warren B. Woodson of Arkansas State Teachers College said today American University at Washington had offered him its head football coaching job, vacated by Walter Young after eight years.

Woodson, returning from Washington where he conferred with university officials, said he probably would make a decision on the offer tomorrow.

In two years at State Teachers College Woodson has turned out four State championship teams in major sports. His 1936 football team was one of the Nation's few undefeated and untied. He came here from Texarkana College.

San Francisco $5,000 Golf Set Today

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Jan. 27.—Nomads of professional golf, hiking over the winter tournament circuit, interrupt a steady diet of medal play this week-end in favor of the style of game identified chiefly with the amateurs—match play.

Firing in the 72-hole $5,000 San Francisco match play open begins tomorrow on the Ingleside course. After 36 holes of qualifying—18 tomorrow and 18 Friday, the 16 low scorers will fight it out the next two days in four match-play rounds.

Those who excel in medal play may find they have no overwhelming advantage in match play. The hole-by-hole competition encourages the taking of great chances. If the shots click it might mean the match, if not it means only losing the hole.

Two links notables who have failed to cut much figure in the three medal-play tournaments thus far in the State are expected to come to life in this competition. They are Lawson Little, former British and American amateur champion, and Denny Shute, holder of the Professional Golfers Association title. Both excel at match play.

Temple's Girl Bowlers Rout Rosslyn

The rough-shod antics of the champion Rosslyn girls in their dash for their second successive title in the Ladies District League were halted abruptly last night when the leaders crumbled before the superior pin-busting of the Temple team which left them on the short end of an odd game decision. Mildred Miskelly and Ida Weinberg fired the gun which spelled defeat for the champions, the former contributing a 115 game and the latter a 329 set. Rosslyn's only win was the result of a 120 game by Blanche Wootton.

Convention Hall, displaying a punch which had been lacking in former matches, upset Georgetown three games, led by Leona Adair's top game of 133 and a 325 set. Highway Engineering strengthened its position in second place with two victories over Lucky Strike although the latter topped its victors in total pinfall by ten pins, rolling a 1624 set. Billie Butler's 137 game and Margaret Lynn's 347 set featured the Engineer's win. High individual game honors went to Agnes Reuben of R. E. A. Cleaners, a 147 effort, which aided in her team's only win from National Beer. Majorie Smith led the Brewers with a 359 set.

The ArcadiaSwanee meeting was postponed.

The pennant aspirations of the Hand Set team for the championship of the C. && P. Telephone League, took a bound last night at Lucky Strike when they blanked A. T. & T. three games. Joe Gooch toppled the maples for a 140 game and 355 set to feature the win. Central neared the season record game mark in its odd-game win over Government, collecting a 627 score. Paul Jarman boosted the big game with 144.

Beyer's 133 game and 353 set carried away theindividual laurels in the Dynamite League at Arcadia. The Duds annexed high game with 549 and total pinfall went to Saayers set of 1,554. . . . Victor Heflin added a new season mark to the record mark to the record books in the Bankers League, spilling the wood for a brilliant 159 game . . . Anne McDaniel's 122 game and 312 set were the highlights of Holmes odd-game win over Bureau of Investigation in the Lucky Strike Ladies League. . . Unity shot 577 in taking a forfeit from Washington Centennial in the Eastern Star Ladies League, Corille Scarlett rolling 142 and Helena Kohler 141 to boost the total.

PETER FICK.

The foremost swimming race ever brought to Washington has been slated for Saturday night in the Shoreham Pool, when Peter Fick, national 100-yard champion, matches his world-record speed against his recent conqueror, the Capital's own Bobby Jordan, now attending Massanutten Military Academy.

Heading a brilliant field entered in the annual winter meet of the District A. A. U. Fick and Jordan will be racing for the second time in two weeks. Jordan, former Central High school boy and familiarly known as "Peanuts" in Washington, defeated Fick less than two weeks ago over the 100-yard distance.

He will enter that only one event Saturday, aiming to repeat his triumph over the national titleholder. Fick, holder of the world's record for the 100 meters and the only man to break Johnny Weissmuller's record for that distance, will also enter the 200-yard freestyle.

Although he usually swims under the colors of the New York Athletic Club, Fick will probably bear the standard of Staunton Military Academy, where he is now a student.

Before he raced the tall, loose-limbed Jordan in the annual meet between the two schools, Fick had been unbeaten in his prep school career. His defeat by Jordan still rankles with him, according to Virginia observers.

Altough the usual last-minute rush of entries has not yet begun, the meet is already assured of a star-studded field in addition to Fick and Jardan, Doroty Forbes, of Piladelpia, alternate backstroker of the Olympic team, and Doroty Lubin, free-style queen of Philadelphia, are entered in both the 100-yard freestyle and 100-yard backstroke events in the women's division.

The Naval Academy has entered men in all nine events on the program. Fick and Boggs will run into one of the country's most promising young swimmers in the 200-yard event, incidentally, facing Irving McCaffrey, a teammate of Jordan's, and holder of the national scholastic championship for the distance.

Old Line Cagers On Carolina Invasion

Maryland's basket ball team will be off today on a three-day excursion through North Carolina that will bring them up against North Carolina State, North Carolina and Duke on successive nights. The Terp ringmen, meanwhile, are preparing for Saturday's match with V. M. I. at Lexington.

The return of Ed Shegogue, bantamweight, and Lancelot Jacques, light-heavyweight, who were on the sick list, and Johnny Gormley's excellent showing in the gym this week assure Maryland of having full strength available for the Cadets. Jacques may be dropped down into the 165-pound division to make way for Gormley, and in this event Bob Walton will be idle.

Columbus University, seeking a match for this week after Springfield canceled, yesterday succeeded in booking Wake Forest for Saturday night's fist-fest at Turner's Arena. Although originally scheduled to box tomorrow, the Barristers moved the match back a day at its opponent's request.

Wake Forest, while new in the collegiate field, is represented by a team of rugged men, virtually all of whom have seen service in amateur rings. The Deacons recently opened their campaign with a 5-3 victory over Atlantic Christian.

Catholic University will be one down to Army when it steps in the ring at West Point day after tomorrow, for Coach Eddie La Fond yesterday announced that the Cards will forfeit in the 125-pound class. Tex Guinan, the team's lone featherweight, is in the infirmary with a touch of grippe.

Ring Heads Give Raspi His Purse

Young Raspi, the Baltimore welterweight, whose purse was held up when he was disqualified for fouling Young Palmer at Turner's Arena last Tuesday night, will be paid for the fight by order of the District Boxing Commission.

Raspi's repeated fouling—official records show he rammed home five low blows in less than three rounds—was attributed by the commission to poor eyesight. In pursuance of a recently inaugurated policy, Raspi was given a thorough eyesight test before the fight. He failed to measure up to commission standards, but was allowed to fight the one bout because of the lack of a suitable substitute. The commission said yesterday that Raspi would not be permitted to fight here again.

3 Duseks Vie Tonight at Wrestle

The delightful, delirious and destructive Duseks will descend upon the Capital tonight in what should be a program of gala free-for-all wrestling at Turner's Arena.

Ernie Dusek, generally considered the best wrestler, if not the roughest grappler, in the entire Dusek clan, will draw as an opponent Honest Jawn Katan, the jarring journeyman. Their encounter is scheduled to a 2-hour, one-fall time limit.

Rudolph Dusek, the second-best wrestler in the aggregation and the roughest of the bunch, will work against squat Abie Coleman, the baby grand piano that walks like a man.

Lost His Title Chance.

Ernie is considered the Clown Prince of the particular wrestling circuit for which he works. At one time he seemed destined to win a claim to the heavyweight championship, but something went wrong and he was defeated right here in Washington after a long winning streak.

Ernie is more than anxious to meet Everett Marshall, one of the claimants to the crown, but Everett refuses the match. Katan, while he has been beaten more than once here, never has failed to give his full quota of thrills to the rassle addicts.

The Rudolph Dusek-Abraham Coleman tussle may overshadow the main event. Both Rudy and Abie are experienced workers, and their styles should result in at least a flock of laughs when they get together.

Rudy is a slap artist, who would rather knock an opponent down than throw him to the mat. Coleman, the squat one, is one of the most puzzling wrestlers in the business to overcome. Comes difficulty, and Abie simply squats closer to the floor, leaving his opposition frustrated as it tries to find some part of him to be wrestled with.

In other preliminaries, Abe Goldberg will encounter Stanley Pinto and Ed Meske will draw Laverne Baxter.

Pa. R. R. Plans Electric Road To Harrisburg

315-Mile 4-Track Project Is Expected to Cost About $50,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Jan. 27.—The Pennsylvania Railroad will begin immediately a 315-mile electrification project for its four-track main line west from Philadelphia to Harrisburg, Pa., and freight lines in the eastern area. The funds for the project will be financed through a bond issue of $52,670,700 some of which will be used for other capital expenditures.

Engineers and surveyors now are in the field and actual construction will begin as soon as possible and will be completed in 18 months. Employment directly on the project will be given to 10,000 persons.

The four-track main line from New York, through Trenton, N. J., Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del., Baltimore to Washington is now electrified, as are also the commutation lines around New York and Philadelphia.

The chief parts of lines in the new electrification work are the four-track main line from Paoli, 20 miles west of Philadelphia, through Lancaster to Harrisburg, 104 miles from this city; the freight line from Morrisville, Pa., opposite Trenton, by way of Columbia, Pa., to the Enola Yards near Harrisburg; the freight line from Columbia to Perryville, Md., where it meets the electric line to Washington; the freight line from Monmouth Junction, N. J., to South Amboy, N. J. Additional yard electrification will be installed at Philadelphia and Perryville. In all, 773 miles of track will be electrified.

Wheat Prices Slump Under Heavy Selling

Wallace's Address Urging Bigger Crops a Factor in Decline.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 27.—Plunged downward by pressure of heavy liquidating sales in grain markets both sides of the Atlantic, wheat fell 2¼ cents a bushel maximum today. The tumble carried wheat to 11 cents below the season's high touched in December, and wiped out one-third of the 33 cents upturn scored in the preceding five months. Secretary Wallace's radio address yesterday, in which he urged that United States farmers produce as abundantly as possible this year, and also suggested likelihood of lower prices, formed the dominating influence.

At the close, wheat was 1⅜ to 2¼ cents under yesterday's finish, May, $1.26¾@1.26⅞; July, $1.10⅞@$1.11; September, $1.07@1.08; Corn, ¾ to 2 cents down; May, $1.08⅛@1.08⅜; July, $1.03⅛@1.03¼; September, 98@98⅛; Oats, ⅞ to 1½ off; May, 49¾@49½; and Rye showing 1⅞ to 2½ cents setback; May, $1.09⅛. Provisions results were unchanged to a decline of 22 cents.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks and Bonds Are Firmer, But Floods and Strikes Restrain Bulls.

New York, Jan. 26.—Bearishness in the stock and bond market lightened and the improved tone was held throughout, but no vigorous rally could get underway. Prices were better at the close than they were at the start. Dollars advanced on sterling and francs and some talk was heard of the possibility of an official lowering of the fran's peg and of willingness on the part of our stabilization fund to see sterling go down a little, but nobody pretended to authoritative information on the latter point. May wheat closed 1⅞ cents lower at 126⅛ cents a bushel. Traders did not care much for the Government's hint of lower prices to come.

Market feeling was so colored by the flood news and the latest developments in the labor troubles that it was difficult to form long distance opinion. It is now apparent that the floods will have two decidedly adverse effects, one partly unfavorable and partly likely to stimulate stocks, and another that may prove to be unfortunate in the long run but which might help the bull side for a while, and still another which should give a flip to some lines of business.

Reconstruction of the devastated areas will bring larger earnings to corporations engaged in construction, and for some, especially the steel concerns, flood damage will be more than offset by supplies sold on flood repair and control. On the adverse side are first the huge losses occasioned by direct damage from floods and second the fall in earning power that will continue for some time. A two-sided result will be the Federal expenditures, some of the money for relief and some for later repairs and river control.

May Spur Inflation.

It begins to look as though no matter how brisk business may be this year and next, the fresh call on Government cash will give a good excuse for abandoning hope of budget balancing for the next year or two at least. If present plans for evacuating the lower Mississippi valley are carried out, there is no limit to the amount of money that can be poured down the river. That will be bad for Government finance and the taxpayer, but conceivably it will hasten the advent of an inflationary boom, and tend to spur the Government to maintain easy money conditions, instead of hurrying along with its reported intention of cracking down on excess reserves.

As some view it, the impasse in the General Motors strike is more threatening to the country's prosperity than are the floods, which are bound to pass and be forgotten. It is hoped that the vital importance of the issue involved in the strike will force an early settlement, so that before long operations will be resumed in the motor industry. Possibly a settlement that would not be a decided victory for Lewis might ward off for a long time the probability of serious strikes in the steel and other industries, but any other settlement would be bound to create much anxiety.

Growing Distrust.

In the financial district uneasiness is manifest, not because of the outlook for higher wages and shorter hours, but because of the obvious decision of the Government (subject, nevertheless, to change if public opinion demands it) to take sides on a matter not of the general welfare of works so much as of labor politics. The affair is unfortunate at a time when so much hope has been held for a better understanding and confidence between industry and the Government.

Favorites.

Among the day's speculative favorites were: Dome Mines, Crosley Radio (on short covering), Lehigh Portland Cement, Lone Star Cement, Boeing, California Packing, Bush Terminal and Hydro-Electric.

Stuyvesant Fish Sells Stock Seat

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—Stuyvesant Fish, a member of the New York Stock Exchange since 1919 and one of its most colorful floor characters, has sold his membership in the exchange, it was learned yesterday. General dissatisfaction with the many new rules and regulations imposed by the Securities and Exchange Commission upon floor members as well as the entire brokerage fraternity was given as the reason for relinquishing his active connections.

Retail Sales Up 13.8 Pct. Over Year Ago

Highest Since 1930, But 24 Per Cent Under 1929 Level.

New York, Jan. 27.—Total retail sales in 1936 amounted to $37,300 million, an increase of 13.8 per cent over 1935, according to estimates made public today by the National Industrial Conference Board. This was the highest level attained since 1930, but was still about 24 per cent below 1929.

The physical volume of retail trade has not declined so drastically when compared with 1929 as has the dollar value, for the unit prices of goods entering into retail trade still remain substantially below the 1929 level. The conference board estimates, on the basis of its index of retail prices for 1936, that the physical volume of retail sales last year was roughly 5 per cent below the figure for 1929.

The greatest gains registered during 1936 occurred, according to preliminary estimates, in sales of furniture, hardware, liquor, and automobiles. Every class of trade, however, registered some increase.

Of each dollar spent in retail establishments in 1936, a little less than one-third went for food and drink; about one-fifth was allotted to automobiles and automotive products, including fuel; and the remainder was spent for clothing, housefurnishings, and sundry items.

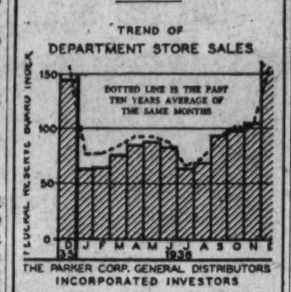
Store Sales Reach Peak for 6 Years



Boston, Mass., Jan. 27.—One result of the satisfactory Christmas retail trade last month was the depletion of stocks on the retailers' shelves. Department store sales last month were the largest for any December since 1930 and a 11 per cent gain over 1935. Reports so far this month show that the advertised "January sales" are running well ahead of last year.

Skeleton Find May Solve Fate Of 5-Year-Old

Shoes Picked Up Near Bones Identified by Father of Cambridge Baby.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Jan. 27.—A father in anguish tonight connected the disappearance of his twin son, three months ago, with discovery today of a skull and bones of a youngster who, investigators said, "was undoubtedly slain and dismembered."

A pair of tiny, weather-beaten shoes furnished the link between the discovery and the disappearance October 30 of golden-haired, 5-year-old Chester Harris, of Cambridge.

"They're my boy's shoes," sobbed Arnold Harris, the twin's father. Then he collapsed in the arms of two officers.

The shoes were found with the bones and skull, behind a billboard on the Boston bank of the Charles River.

Medical Examiner William J. Brickley said "there is no question but what the boy was murdered."

Police Superintendent Edward Fallon also said the bones indicated foul play, but was not convinced the shoes had established positive identification.

Brickley reported the shin and feet bones were missing, indicating "that the body had been dismembered and that the murder occurred in some other spot."

Floods in Texas Helped Buchanan Win House Seat

By the Associated Press.

Floods helped make a Representative of the diminutive Texan who steered a $790,000,000 fund for flood and other relief through the House Tuesday.

Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee was driven out of the farming business by floods which ravaged Texas' Brazos River Valley years ago.

"Farewell to the Brazos bottom,
I bid you long adieu;
I may migrate to hell some day,
But I will never return to you."

Detective's Pants Pocket 'Razed' by Fire in Court

Fire "razed" the left-hand trousers pocket of Detective William G. Fawcett, of the First Precinct, yesterday while he testified in Police Court in a robbery case. The fire wrecked Fawcett's pocket and composure before it was extinguished by evacuation of the pocket's contents and strenuous hand-slapping. The detective was uninjured.

Fawcett said he had several loose "kitchen matches" in his pocket when he took the stand before Judge Isaac R. Hitt. He struck the side of the witness box, and the matches were ignited against some keys.

TibbettExonerated In Singer's Death

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—Lawrence Tibbett, star of opera and screen, was exonerated completely today of any blame in the death of Joseph Sterzini, a choral singer whom he accidentally stabbed during a rehearsal yesterday.

Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, acting chief medical examiner, said an autopsy showed Sterzini died of heart disease.

"In my opinion there is absolutely no basis for criminal prosecution," Dr. Gonzales said.

Obviously distressed by the mishap, Tibbett said it was "the most terrible thing that has ever happened to me."

Flood Causes Suicide.

Wallace, Idaho, Jan. 27 (AP).—Despondency caused by fear for his parents in flooded Ohio, friends said today, caused Paul E. Mayhugh, 19, a CCC worker, to take his own life. Camp officers found the youth's body, a stab wound in the chest and a slash on the wrist. They said Mayhugh's parents live at Shadyside, Ohio.

2 Are Convicted In Smith Extortion

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—A. Henry Ross, Brooklyn lawyer, and Max D. Krone, private detective, were convicted by a General Sessions jury today on a charge of extorting $1,500 from Alfred E. Smith, jr., son of the former Governor.

The men were accused of taking advantage of an extra-marital affair between Smith and Catherine Pavlick. They were remanded to the Tombs without bail until February 5, when they will be sentenced. The maximum penalty is 15 years.

Piccard Plans 20-Mile Climb In Stratosphere

2,000 Small Balloons to Be Used in Ascent; Trial Flight Mapped.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Jan 27.—With about 2,000 small balloons to take him up, and dynamite caps for safety valves to come down, Prof. Jean Piccard, University of Minnesota, announced today the most daring stratosphere flight plans ever made

He expects to rise easily to 20 miles, which is 7 miles over the present record, and far above the capacity of present-style stratosphere bags.

But to Prof. Piccard, as he described his plans today to the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences, there is nothing risky or spectacular. He is making use merely of the new knowledge recently gained from the weather sounding balloons by himself and the colleagues who listened to him today.

Plans to Make Test.

He said that this summer, in Minnesota, he plans to make a preliminary test. About 80 rubber sounding balloons will take up a one-man gondola. The balloons range in diameter from 4 feet to 16, which is their bursting point.

The little balloons will be tied above the gondola in bunches, with dynamite caps fixed where one balloon or one bunch could be cut loose. Electric wires to the gondola will enable Piccard to fire the caps and stop the experimental ascent. Ballast will be relied on to bring him down with the remaining balloons.

For the 20-mile ascent, with perhaps 2,000 balloons carrying a large stratosphere gondola, it is expected the balloons will begin to burst at their ceiling. Experiments at Minnesota show that they will not all explode simultaneously and that many will go to 20 miles.

Slow Descent Expected.

Even explosion of several hundred would not, Prof. Piccard said, cause the gondola to fall. Its descent would be slow. Ballast would control the descent.

The reason the sounding balloons can go so much higher, Prof. Piccard said, is their light weight compared with a gas bag of equal lifting capacity. The weather balloons are 10 times lighter, with the same amount of safety, he explained.

At 20 miles Prof. Piccard would be very nearly "outside" the earth's atmosphere so far as its density is concerned. Most of the air is compressed by gravity in levels below 20 miles, although thin gas extends scores of miles higher.

Madrilenos Ready To 'Eat Leather'

Madrid, Jan. 27 (AP).—The people of Madrid "will eat their shoes before they surrender," Gen. Jose Miaja, head of the Socialist defense junta, proclaimed tonight.

His followers moved vigorously to resist fresh insurgent pressure, whether by armed attack or starvation.

Gen. Miaja's declaration was followed immediately by an order putting the city's food supply on a ration system basis, effective February 1.

An insurgent thrust at Madrid's northern defenses was thrown back by the Socialist defenders in the El Pardo sector, five miles from Madrid. Other attacks were repulsed south of the capital on the road to Aranjuez.

Several artillery shells burst in the center of Madrid, but the city had a respite from air bombing due to cold, heavy rains.

'Absolute Altimeter' Invention Would End Blind Flying Toll

'Ultra Short Wave Beam' to Be Used as Feeler Being Perfected by Dr. DeForest; New Turbulence Solution Reported.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Jan. 27.—Dr. Lee DeForest, celebrated radio inventor, worked today on an "absolute altimeter" that may save future airliners from disaster when flying blind.

The instrument would throw out a feeler beam of "ultra short waves," connected to a dial on the control panel, the 64-year-old scientist explained.

"By using this type of wave on an approaching warning such as I have in mind, the pilot caught in a storm could direct it from the inside of the cabin toward the ground or straight ahead like a searchlight," he said.

"The high frequency waves—(the shorter the wave the higher the frequency'—would be instantaneously reflected from the ground to the plane and register the intervendistance."

New York, Jan. 27 (AP).—A new solution of "turbulence," a problem that has baffled engineers for 60 years and impeded progress of aircraft, was reported to the institute of the aeronautical sciences here today.

The solution is a fundamental theory by Prof. Th. von Karman, of the California Institute of Technology, director of the Guggenheim Aeronautical Laboratory there.

It gives equations by which engineers can calculate troublesome forces, invisible in the air, and moving too fast in liquids for practical observations for hydraulic engineering. In airplanes the "turbulence" is a force which operates close to the surface of the wings.

The eddying air causes a "drag," or obstacle to flight, of fantastic proportions. It has been estimated that ridding a plane wing of turbulence would reduce the drag possibly 60 seek is a smooth or "laminar" flow of air over wings surfaces.

It is possible, with instruments, to measure the turbulence at any point. With this measurement Prof. per cent. What aviation scientists von Karman's equations permit calculation of the turbulence from that point until the eddying dies out.

Britons Denied Access To Moroccan Airfield

London, Jan. 27 (AP).—A British naval party, which inspected Spanish Morocco recently in an investigation of reports of a German incursion, was not permitted to visit the Melilla airfield, a question in the House of Commons disclosed today.

When Geoffrey Mander, opposition Liberal, asked why the airdrome was not inspected, Viscount Cranborne, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, replied tersely: "Access was forbidden."

He added that he "understood" there were about 150 Germans at Melilla, but that there was no evidence of German troops having landed in the Ceuta or Tetuan areas.

Loss to Public Of $65,898,000 Laid to Beason

By the Associated Press.

Counsel for the Securities Commission contended yesterday the public lost $65,898,000 of $263,862,000 which it paid into investment trusts sponsored by Ross Beason and associates, formerly of Salt Lake City, but now of New York, according to commission officials.

Cedric H. Smith, an associate of Beason and member of Smith, Burris & Company, Chicago securities distributors, agreed with figures cited to prove this, but disputed that they showed a "net loss" in the amount alleged.

Testifying in the commission's investment trust investigation, Smith sharply criticized "fixed" investment trusts, 10 of which were among the 12 trusts sponsored by Beason and his associates.

"There is no excuse for a fixed trust," he declared. "It is an unsatisfactory medium of investment. Conceding honesty in management and proper trusteeship, there is still no excuse for them."

Officials said securities in the portfolios of fixed trusts cannot be changed to meet chinging economic conditions. Such fixed trusts as were examined by the commission yesterday contain provisions for compulsory elimination of a security unless certain dividend requirements are met.

In management trusts, on the other hand, the portfolios may be changed at will.

Seagram's FINE WHISKIES SINCE 1857

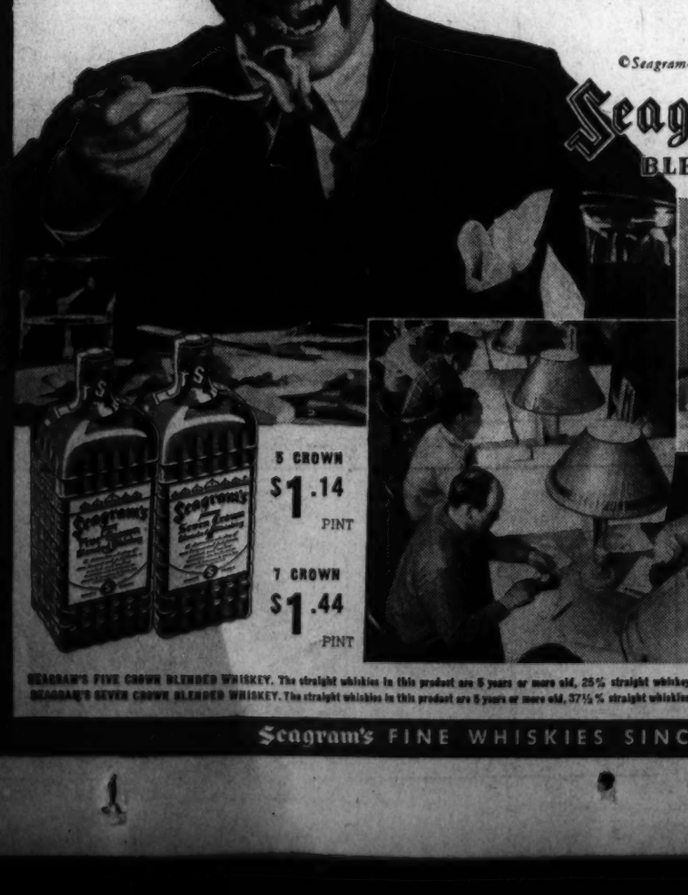
and-you'll never feel your age



"HELLO-BREAKFAST!"—Records from the Adirondack Research show that Mr. E. E. Hale ate his regular hearty breakfast each morning after moderate drinking of Crown Whiskey the preceding evening. Mr. Hale, 32, is a graduate of the American Academy of Dramatic Arts.

Avoid late hours, rich foods, overstrain, worry. And if you drink, be sure it's the form of whiskey that is best for you.

Maybe the 5740 individual records now in our files will help you. They represent 41 days of research work with a group of everyday men by a world-famous psychologist.

He found that a normal evening's drinking of fine blended whiskey such as Seagram's Crowns did not appreciably affect minds, muscles, sleep, or appetite the following day.

At the bar, and at home, follow this welcome guide to whiskey kindness. You, too, will prefer Crowns for kindness, and for rich, mellow taste.
